Surfers and Scenic residents square off

By ROBERT MISKIMON

WITH THE ARRIVAL of summer, Scenic Road has been transformed into a battle zone between surfers and residents.

Residents along the winding, oceanfront road say they are disgusted with open drinking and drug use, public sex, and disrespect for property owners' rights to peace and privacy.

Youthful surfers say they feel targeted as scapegoats for all the ills of Carmel Beach, and blame most of the abuses on out-of-towners and tourists. Local surfers say they are responsible and lawful.

And city officials, for the most part, seem to feel that everything within their power already is being done to control the problems.

For many residents, however, that's not enough.

"Scenic does not belong to Carmel any more," said Mike Menkal, who has lived on Scenic near 10th Avenue for two years. "It belongs to the kids. It's a disease and something has got to be done."

Menkal said he must clean up garbage which litters his front yard every day — refuse which he says is dropped by young people and surfers who use the beach and who disregard residents' rights.

"There's so much loud music and filthy language down here, residents are afraid to come out," Menkal said. "The police are on the beat, but the minute they leave, they're at it again. They're belligerent and obnoxious. The police are great, beautiful. They've done a great job, as much as they can.

"The city council has got to do something because it's ruining Carmel. It's not a beach that's public any more; it's just for a few kids."

Menkal — and other Scenic residents — said they have witnessed public drinking and drug use, and open sex in and around cars that congest Scenic at peak periods, usually weekends.

'I see drugs being passed openly, beer cans. This has been going on for a couple of years, but it's getting worse. They see a patrol car coming and they ditch their booze. One Scenic resident put his house up for sale because he couldn't stand it anymore.'

"I have seen couples having sex in cars," said Jerry Winters, who lives on Camino Real but who jogs with his wife, Joan, along Scenic. "I've seen eight cars parked together with open booze. It's unbelievable on the weekends, with the obscenities and open defiance of ordinances.

"I see drugs being passed openly, beer cans. This has been going on for a couple of years, but it's getting worse. They see a patrol car coming and they ditch their booze. One Scenic resident put his house up for sale because he couldn't stand it any more."

Winters, who owns two Carmel businesses with his wife, believes more intensive foot patrols by police would help, but said Chief John McGilvray has expressed that clearing up problems along Scenic is "way down on his list of priorities."

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. While there is no limit on length, brevity is encouraged. 'Voice your concern'

Dear Editor:

I have taken note of the many expressions of disgust at the temporary defilement of our beautiful scenic Highway 1 by "small shabby trucks" carrying political messages.

I trust that these concerned persons will be equally appalled and come forward when our scenic highway needs defenders against threats of not-so-temporary despoilment of the viewshed by a proposed conference center, visitor accommodations, a resort up the hill provided with cable car access, a fruitstand and a residential subdivision — all between Point Lobos Reserve and Rio Road.

The admirers of the Mission Fields wetlands and Hatton Canyon could probably use support right now in their opposition to having these delight-giving areas transformed into respectively a housing development and a commuter road.

When each of these projects comes up for public hearings, please write and/or voice your concern to our ever-responsive county supervisors in Salinas before the trees have been "harvested" and the bulldozer has cleared the natural vegetation to make way for asphalt and buildings.

Dear Editor:

Carmel artist Paulla should get all the thanks Richard Bovard gave to the Carmel artists "who did such an excellent job" of restoring "the statue" of Father Serra.

Paulla gave Father Serra his first restoration job in 1967, following this up in 1971 and 1975. This year makes the fourth time she has protected the padre from wind and weather.

Safety at airport

Dear Editor:

It's about time a staunch safety advocate gets off the runway and heads the FAA in a safer direction. As administrator, retired Vice Admiral Donald Engen should consider this:

- Freeze the millions earmarked for the Monterey Airport, especially funds for constructing a new 3,600 foot general aviation runway. It's unacceptable for our government to lavish public money on rich, greedy flyboys while programs for the hungry, poor and middle class are drastically cut back.
- Order air controllers to withhold training facilities from San Francisco Bay area Navy pilots. Monterey's airspace is hazardous enough without being saddled with this additional load.
- Tell Fort Ord to stop playing war games over our rooftops. Ear-splitting military exercises using screeching, squealing aircraft belong in the boondocks — not in the heart of this crowded peninsula. Such inhuman noise levels violate California's standards and can't be tolerated. The Pentagon must be reminded that this is Monterey, not Beirut!
- Disclose fully to the voters the costly long-term health effects of exposure to aviation noise and radiation.
- Support a nuclear-free zone for the Monterey Peninsula.
- Keep all flights out of our wilderness and public parks whether flying low or high.
- Crack down hard on private "joystickers" who transport more than 90 percent of the hard drugs consumed in America. No one can remain silent while the FAA unwittingly aids the enemy in the losing war on drugs.

Give him a chance

Dear Editor:

I cannot believe the insensitiveness of the Concerned Parents and Friends of Carmel Youth group, allowing their letter to the Board of Directors, with remarks concerning Philip Cherry, to be provided to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

Anyone who knows Philip sees him as a highly moral, soft spoken, caring young man. He has a special way with young people. It is obvious that some of the group members did not take the time to acquaint themselves with him. Then, I think, they might have handled this in a more thoughtful way.

I know some of these parents who have quality young men of their own. Philip is every bit as fine a young man. He does not deserve this kind of treatment. Couldn't someone have gone to him and expressed the group's feelings before he had to read such a down-grading article about himself?

Does the Concerned Group want someone with personal high standards, clean record, upstanding qualities, on-job experience of four years, local, well known to the community, respect for and of the young people? Or, perhaps, an unknown with a piece of paper qualifying him for the job, who knows what kind of personal tastes are included?

Also, I though the applicants for the position were reviewed at a closed meeting. How did the Concerned Parents group know so much about other applications?

I'm very proud of my nephew, Philip Cherry, but I am very saddened with the way he is being treated by the group that calls itself "Concerned Parents."

The quality of Philip's lifestyle is above reproach. Children would only benefit from being associated with such a fine human being. He respects others as well as himself.

I'm sure if this matter involved one of the "caring parents' " young men, they would have appreciated a more sensitive and caring approach.

If Philip has a fault, it is not being able to stick up for himself, and maybe, like the scarecrow in The Wizard of Oz, it is because he does not have that piece of paper.

But can he do the job? I say give him a chance and work with him.

We need a professional

Dear Editor:

I am a member of the Board of Directors of the Carmel Youth Center. I also serve as secretary.

The purpose of this letter is to correct an impression left by your article of last week and to further enlighten your readers as to the present rift among the board members as well as concerned parents and citizens.

The hiring of Phil Cherry has caused a great deal of animosity between the members of the board. I am part of the reason for that animosity and am writing this letter as a parent and concerned citizen.

In the event that you may wonder why Phil got the job when there were so many accredited applicants, the answer, in my opinion, is twofold: retrograde thinking by the majority of the board coupled with the untenable approach that a "local person" should have the job — regardless of qualifications or ability.

Undeniably, Phil Cherry has accomplished something. He has fanned the flames of interest in the Youth Center that have been dormant for too long. Through perseverance of the concerned, this laggard board might accidentally trip into the path of enlightenment and put the youth back into the Youth Center.

It is interesting that the board was divided for and against Phil Cherry, with those against him all being parents with children who should be using the Youth Center and those for him having no young children.

The world has changed very much — it is the age of specialization in every field and profession. We should hire a professional for the Youth Center, not just a young man with good intentions.

Praises rescue team

Dear Editor:

While visiting your friendly, beautiful city of Carmel, I had an angina attack on May 7 and another at about 11:30 p.m. May 9.

My daughter, Shiela Gholson Duhring, drove to get the police, who quickly responded by getting the paramedics, who expertly gave me oxygen on the way to Community Hospital.

We highly commend your efficient policemen and paramedics who acted so efficiently when requested so suddenly. Their alertness and attention is appreciated so very much. Please express our thanks to both departments.

Cheers for Pullens

Dear Editor:

I have to tell you folks. Jerry and Karen Pullen are just about the hardest working couple I know. The amount of time they devote to getting the boys and girls and their parents together to play ball is incredible. Three cheers for this grand couple!

City should listen to Scenic complaints

RESIDENTS along Scenic Drive are uptight and angry about problems related to the use of the beach by a few irresponsible people. Some of these people are surfers, but some may also be out-of-town visitors.

Some of the residents, in fact, are so irritated by the chronic problems along Scenic which get worse in the summer months that they called the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook to express their displeasure with the surfers and particularly with the city council.

As indicated by the police chief (See coverage, this issue), these problems are not new. Scenic residents have pleaded their case before the city council before. On at least one occasion, they got council approval for a special walking patrol in the area.

Now, the residents complain that most of the council seems uninterested in their problem and that the police, while concerned and caring, have other priorities.

The surfers, on the other hand, feel they have been made the scapegoat for residents' frustrations with everyone who uses the beach area irresponsibly. The few irresponsible surfers give all a bad name, they protest.

There is some truth to the laments of both sides. What better proof does anyone need that the surfing crowd can be very responsible than the fact that the annual Surfabout, a competitive event last weekend at Carmel Beach, ran two days without incident or police arrest? The only police problem involved traffic citations.

By and large, surfers are a healthy, positive group who enjoy outdoor recreation. And they have as much right to use the beach area as anyone else.

The residents have legitimate concerns about traffic congestion, noise, drugs, and public indecencies. Whether these infractions are strictly caused by surfers remains open to question, however.

With the creation of some timed parking zones along Scenic by the city council, and a higher priority on enforcement by the police, it seems most of these problems could be minimized, if not eliminated.

So long as there are different groups with different interests using the beach, there will be clashes. It's the job of the city to provide order and to protect the rights of citizens, while insuring that surfers can responsibly enjoy their sport.

Some residents feel the city council has turned a deaf ear to their situation. Perhaps more careful attention by city officials to what citizens have to say is a good way to begin.

'Ode to Buzz'

Dear Editor:

Growing up in Carmel was a truly unique experience. Being such a small community, we were afforded a "closeness" with classmates, friends, parents, and teachers that was rich in forming lasting memories. Thanks to my mother, who sends me special newspaper clippings, I can keep somewhat abreast of what is happening. A good case in point is your article in the March 1 issue on Mr. "Buzz" Rainer.

I was a freshman at Carmel High School in September 1955. So was Mr. Rainer, in that this was his very first teaching assignment.

I have enclosed a homework assignment (25 years late) that briefly expresses my appreciation for his enthusiasm.

ODE TO MY FRESHMAN ENGLISH TEACHER

Mr. Rainer is a dear,
We had no need of him to fear.

I remember, oh so well,
How much stuff he had to tell.

Nouns, and verbs and adjectives,
All to make a story that lives.

Compositions so renown,
Don't forget the right pronoun!

We all helped to celebrate
His first son, which was first rate.

Thanks, Carmel for a school so small,
You could know each one and all.

"The House That Jack Built" was so fine,
You teased about "The Sands of Time."

Memories are still in sight,
Of "Tiger, tiger burning bright."

Stillwater Cove compromise expected

A COMPROMISE in the feud between the Del Monte Forest Property Owners and the Pebble Beach Company over public access to Stillwater Cove is expected to be settled by next month.

That is the optimistic word from new Pebble Beach Co. President Tom Oliver, who was appointed to that post earlier this month.

Oliver has taken a conciliatory attitude toward the property owners and expressed optimism that an agreement can be worked out before the issue once again is presented to the Coastal Commission in September as part of the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program.

"We're all working very hard with one another to find a solution," Oliver told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook June 18. "Every party involved has shown good faith."

Oliver said he could not elaborate on the talks between Pebble Beach Co. and the property owners until after an agreement is reached.

Public access to Stillwater Cove has been the stumbling block to Coastal Commission approval of the Del Monte plan, which was adopted a year ago minus settlement of the Stillwater Cove access question.

Coastal Commissioners June 14 delayed action on the public access to Stillwater Cove issue at the request of the attorneys for Pebble Beach Co. and the property owners.

Stillwater Cove is a small, approximately 100-yard, stretch of beach adjacent to the private Pebble Beach Beach and Tennis Club. A pier also is part of the beach, but has been closed because of disrepair. The fate of the pier also is included in the compromise talks.

Under the proposal now being negotiated, the beach property north of the pier would remain for the private use of club members. The southern portion of the beach would be open to the public.

STILLWATER COVE Beach in Pebble Beach on most days appears to be its own secluded tropical stretch of sand unharmed by man. But if the state Coastal Commission okays a plan to open the private beach to the public, it would lose its beauty and merely become another littered and ruined beach, Del Monte Forest property owners claim. The commission is to consider the thorny prolem once again in September. (Photo by Holly McFarland.)

Only 50 members of the public and 10 scuba divers would be allowed on the property at one time. Security guards would be stationed at two new access gates.

Pebble Beach Co. would have to build an eight-foot wide access stairway from the parking lot to the beach. Six parking spaces in the parking lot are to be reserved for public use. There is no mention in the proposal of tour bus parking.

The beach will have to be open to the public during daylight hours. The parking lot but may be closed 45 days a year for special events such as the golf tournaments and during the luncheons from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Pebble Beach Co. also will be required to build a restroom for public use.

Forestry workers help Carmel make tree survey

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A BLONDE and brunette wearing bluejeans, backpacks and green hats are on the prowl in the backyards and streets of Carmel.

But not to worry. These "invaders" actually are two summer "forestry technicians" who have been hired by the city to conduct the annual tree survey.

Gina Thompson and Linda Trockey — who will be seniors at Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo next fall — can be identified by those answering the knock on their doors by their green hats marked "Carmel Tree Survey."

The survey began earlier this week and is expected to continue for the next two months. It will cost the city about $3,200.

"This is a continuous survey that began in 1971 by Forester Bob Tate and (the late forestry commissioner) Ray Taylor," City Forester Gary Kelly told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook June 13.

"The thrust of it is not just to precisely count the number of trees, but to make decisions based on the inventory," Kelly said. "The outcome of decisions that we make now will be realized 50 to 100 years from now."

For example, last year the survey revealed that on private property there was a shortage of trees that were two to six inches in diameter that have the potential to become upper canopy trees, Kelly said.

As a result of that knowledge, the city has adopted a policy to encourage planting of these potential upper canopy trees on private property when feasible, Kelly said.

The health and number of trees on private property is important to the continued urban forest. That's why the city also conducts the survey in back yards and front yards, Kelly said.

"What's on private property is every bit as important as what's happening on city property," he said.

Under the survey procedure, the city is divided into a random four segments of residential houses and a separate zone for the commercial district. Trees in the residential zones are surveyed every four years while the commercial district trees are counted every other year, Kelly explained.

The residential blocks are selected at random so that it does not take four years to return to a certain area for surveying, he continued.

The random selection is important so that diseased or a deplenished supply of trees does not go unnoticed until the next survey of that area four years later, Kelly said.

"Should disease or pest infiltration occur in a large area it would not become known to us," he said.

Another advantage to the survey is that it gives residents an opportunity to ask questions about their trees, Kelly said.

"They (the surveyors) can answer questions and tell homeowners about any problems, such as beetle infestation and suggested remedies," he said.

The survey will categorize trees such as Monterey Pine, Monterey Cypress, Coast Live Oak, Acacia, Redwood and Eucalyptus.

The surveyors also will categorize the health of the tree as either "excellent, good, fair or poor," Kelly said.

For more information on the tree survey, telephone the city forestry department at 624-3543.

New principal hired at Briarcliff

WHEN Briarcliff Academy students return to school next fall they will be greeted by a new principal and a new building for the dance studio, art classes and computer lab.

Marilyn Tully, formerly principal of the lower school (grades kindergarten through fifth), has been named principal of the private school near Dolores Street and Second Avenue.

Ms. Tully will replace Jerry Traynor, who was released last week by the board of trustees of the school. Traynor had served as headmaster of Briarcliff Academy ever since it opened in September 1982.

"The word is reorganization," Ms. Tully said in explanation of Traynor's dismissal.

Before she joined the Briarcliff staff in 1982 as a consultant, Ms. Tully was a principal and therapist in private schools in New York City and Europe.

The new principal is just one of several changes at Briarcliff Academy.

Construction now is underway on a $350,000 building on the southern school property.

The new building will be divided into three major areas — a dance studio, an arts and crafts room, and a 10-computer lab, Ms. Tully said.

The building also will have room for some offices and restrooms, she added.

In another project, the school board has decided to double the space of the existing administration building to make room for offices and a reference library.

A previous plan for a separate complete library was dropped because most of the students go to Harrison Memorial Library twice a week, the new principal said.

This fall also will mark the end of the grade expansion program adopted by the board when Briarcliff Academy first opened.

For the first time the school will have an eighth grade starting this fall, she said. Last year the school expanded to offer a seventh grade.

In other staff changes announced by Ms. Tully, Rita Patterson has been appointed academic dean of the upper division. She will continue to teach sixth-eighth grade English, social studies and math.

The new first grade teacher is Debbie Meyer, a San Diego State University graduate. Mary Carl is the new fifth grade teacher and Renne Perry has been reassigned to the fourth grade class.

Teachers Peggy Stichter, who moved to Oregon; and Nancy Healey, who relocated to Massachusetts; have left the school.

Enrollment at Briarcliff Academy this year was 127 students. Ms. Tully has 150 students registered for this fall and expects a total of 160 to enroll by September. Capacity of the school is 180 students.

Six of the eight grades already have reached maximum enrollment. Those classes closed are: kindergarten through second; and fifth through seventh.

Annual tuition at Briarcliff Academy ranges from $2,000 for kindergarten to $3,500 for eighth graders.

Scenic residents wary of another surfing season patrols have been assigned to the Carmel Beach and Scenic area.

"We've had complaints, but no more than in the past," Chief McGilvray said. "Officers have been put on a foot beat there, but they see the car coming and they hide. We have had a buildup a little sooner this year because of the good weather.

"Whenever we have the available manpower, we patrol there."

Chief McGilvray said citations have been issued for having open containers of alcohol and climbing the fence installed to protect the banks, but said he isn't aware of any arrests in the Scenic area in recent months.

"The problem is pretty much the same as it's always been," McGilvray said. "With the warmer weather, the kids congregate. We can't stop them from doing that. It's the illegal activities we're concerned about. Some people would like to not see them at all."

Several surfers interviewed along Scenic June 14 expressed a different view of the situation.

"I don't think it's local, Carmel people who come down here and urinate on people's lawns," said Paul Davis, 15, of Carmel. "It's the people who are bums. We go to school, we get good grades. Surfing is really the only thing for kids to do here in Carmel."

'I don't think it's local, Carmel people who come down here and urinate on people's lawns. It's the people who are bums. We go to school, we get good grades. Surfing is really the only thing for kids to do here in Carmel.'

"If we had the facilities, it would be a lot different," said James Roberts, 15, of Pacific Grove. "We have to go all the way down to the foot of Ocean Avenue to find a public restroom. I've never seen any drug problem, and I've been using the beach for three or four years."

"I've never seen any of that," said Matt Wilkinson, 16, of Carmel. "We mostly just come down here, have a few jokes, and hit it."

"A lot of the tourists are the problem," Roberts added. "They come down and use the beach for parties. Surfers clean up their mess, usually."

One Scenic resident who asked for anonymity said he feels the problems could be resolved with concerted effort by the city council and police department. Specifically, he said, what's needed are marked and enforced parking spaces.

"It's something that can be controlled but the council doesn't seem to give a damn," he said. "There's no law down here. Many times you can't get an emergency vehicle through here. They could mark off the parking spoaces and meter it.

"Carmel has got a super police force; there just aren't enough enforceable laws. With some laws from the council, they could clear this up. I have no objection to surfing, but to their blocking traffic and being obnoxious. Some of these are not kids — they're older."

THE PRIORITIES of the city council, in the estimation of this Scenic resident, have become skewed.

"The city council is too busy doing that damn park (Piccadilly Park) and trying to build a city hall to deal with this."

Carmel City Administrator Douglas Schmitz said traffic and parking problems along Scenic will be addressed as part of the second phase of the beach restoration project, which is not expected to get off the ground in time to make a difference this summer.

"The subject will come up in phase two of the beach repairs," Schmitz said. "It includes parking and pedestrian walkways on Scenic. There is not one officer specifically assigned to Scenic Drive. The police do regular foot walks along the beach and patrol Scenic Drive."

Another resident who asked for anonymity recalled that the Scenic Road Property Owners Association took its case to the city council a few years ago, with the result that $25,000 was budgeted for more police patrols — including a walking patrol.

"Then the concern became greater with the dunes and the banks than with the problems along Scenic Drive," the longtime resident said. "There is no foot patrolman along there. I do not ever see a patrolman there and I walk often.

"They double park and you see them disrobe and urinate. Vans park diagonally with the cars parked in a patio effect into the street, with sun chairs and two-foot-high speakers.

"I've passed by several times when the smell of marijuana was all over."

Both residents who asked for anonymity said they did so out of fear of reprisals by surfers if their names appeared in print.

Chief McGilvray said the residents' discomfort hasn't been brought directly to his attention.

"We've offered to meet with the residents to discuss their problems, but no one has come forward," he said. "I don't know if I'd want to see them organize citizen patrols."

Carmel City Councilman David Maradei, who proposed closure of Scenic Drive to all traffic several months ago, said he is sympathetic to problems of Scenic Drive residents.

"Personally, I would like to close off Scenic to traffic and allow no parking," Maradei said. "I decided to slow down on my proposal when the beach rehabilitation task force decided to change the traffic patterns on Scenic.

"The architect is to present final plans for the beach walkway soon and then we can deal with traffic problems, which might eliminate the problems the residents are concerned with. I feel Scenic Drive should be an area not impinged upon by outsiders who bring drugs and whatnot into Carmel."

ACCESS WALKWAY between Scenic and San Antonio provides a place for a surfer to doff his wet suit after riding the waves. Residents along Scenic say they are offended by some of the surfers' habits — particularly their disregard for the privacy and peace of property owners. More police patrols and marked, timed parking spaces would help, some residents believe. (Photos by Holly McFarland.)

Sanitary district weighs rate hike

DIRECTORS of the Carmel Sanitary District are to decide on a 33 percent increase in user fees at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, June 21.

The board of directors meets in Carmel City Hall, Monte Verde Street and Ocean Avenue.

If approved after a public hearing, the rate hike would increase residential fees from $6 to $8 per month, and commercial fees by 33 percent based on use, according to manager Michael Zambory.

The sanitary board also is scheduled to conduct a public hearing and to adopt a $1.2 million budget for the 1984-85 fiscal year which includes an average 4.4 percent salary increase for employees.

"The increase varies from 1 percent to 12 percent for individual employees, but the average is 4.4 percent," Zambory said.

In addition, the board is to discuss the status of various projects, including its water reclamation project.

Adjustments board to weigh permits for four businesses

FOUR APPLICATIONS for businesses in the Cottage Row retail complex now under construction are to be reviewed by the Carmel Board of Adjustments when it meets at 4 p.m. Wednesday, June 27 at city hall.

Cottage Row developer Craig McFarland plans to appeal a "bronze sculpture gallery only" condition proposed to be placed on the already approved application for Bennett Sculpture.

The land use committee of the board — chairwoman Sandy Swain, Art Mertens and John Logan — has recommended that the condition be changed to allow only a "sculpture gallery."

McFarland argued before the city council June 5 that the use permit should be issued as an art gallery because a "sculpture gallery" restriction would hamper any future efforts if Bennett Sculpture closed.

McFarland presented his case to the council because earlier the council approved the Bennett Sculpture application on his appeal of a board of adjustments decision to deny the application.

McFarland argued before the city council June 5 that the use permit should be issued as an art gallery because a 'sculpture gallery' restriction would hamper any future efforts if Bennett Sculpture closed.

The board also is to consider three other applications by businesses that want to open in Cottage Row, northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue.

The land use committee recommends approval of Brendan Walter's application to relocate his interior decorating business to Cottage Row. The Walter/White business now is in a building on the southwest corner of San Carlos Street and Seventh Avenue.

The committee, however, does recommend that the full board restrict the sale of graphic arts and jewelry to 10 percent of the total sales. White is expected to argue against that proposed restriction.

The committee also ruled that Empire Gifts, now in the Court of the Fountains on Mission Street, should be allowed to relocate to Cottage Row.

However, the committee has taken a tougher stand on an application by James Giles to open another jewelry store in Cottage Row.

Giles said the location will be the site of retail sales, repair and custom design work. He also wants to sell bronze sculpture and paintings.

Giles currently has locations in the Hanson Galleries on Ocean Avenue and on Dolores Street.

The committee recommends that the application be approved as long as Giles closes one of his other stores.

He also will have to get that landlord to agree not to rent the former location to another jewelry store, the committee recommends.

OTHER APPLICATIONS before the board June 27 include:

• A proposal by Hugh Gottfried to subdivide his 52,300 sq. ft. property into four building lots.

The Gottfried property is near Mission Trail Park and is bordered by Acacia Way, Flanders Way and 11th Avenue. The land use committee wants Gottfried to provide a scenic easement adjacent to the park to protect views.

• A request by Jack West of 20th Century Masters to sell fine art books in the gallery, west side of Mission Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues. The committee recommends approval.

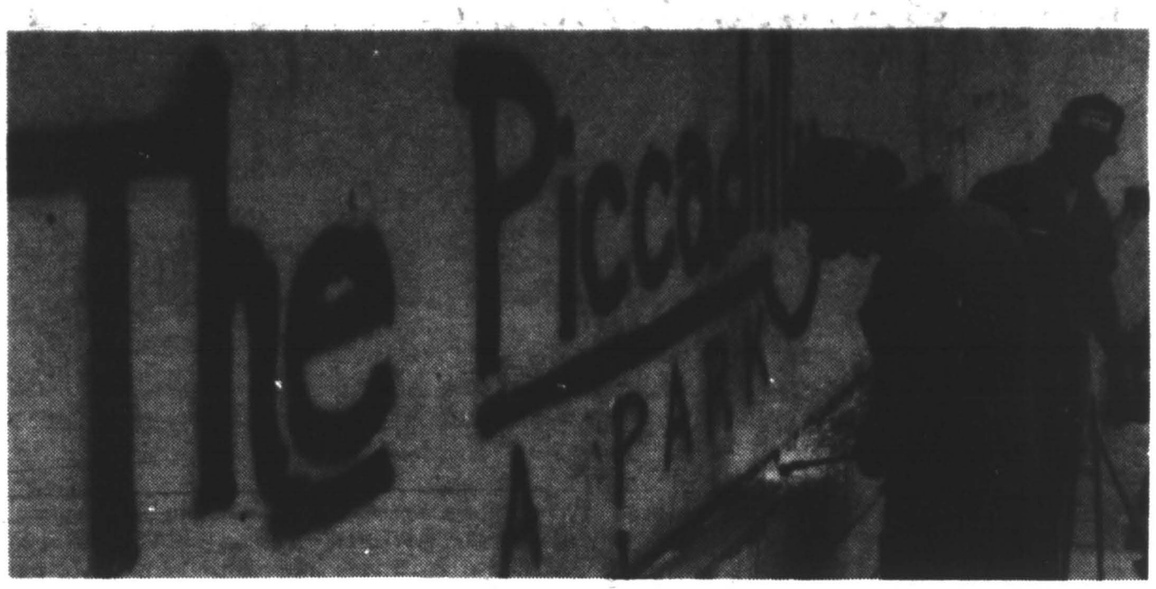
• A plan by Allan Keleman to open a capuccino and expresso bar at the site formerly occupied by the Moulin de Carmel restaurant, southwest corner of Dolores Street and Seventh Avenue. The committee recommends conditional approval.

• A proposal by Barry Throgmorton to open a real estate office on the northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue. The committee recommends approval.

• A request by Ferris Burleson to open a medical insurance examiners office on the southeast corner of Junipero and Fourth avenues. The committee recommends approval.

• A plan by John and Juanita Fields to open a food service in conjunction with the bar at Sade's, south side of Ocean Avenue between Lincoln and Monte Verde streets.

A previous application by the former owners had been approved. However, because six months have elapsed the new owners must obtain another use permit. The committee recommends approval.



Piccadilly work progresses

WORK ON Piccadilly Park has moved slower than the city anticipated because of some unexpected problems at the site on the west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues. After the city started some digging adjacent to Toots Lagoon, workers found some rotted wood at the foundation of the restaurant. The city then had to obtain a "hold harmless" agreement with Toots Lagoon and alter some work on the retaining wall next to Toots Lagoon. However, with that mission accomplished, the city is expected to start landscaping work on the park later this month. The park was to be planted in May. Above, city worker Buzz Cole burned off the pipes on the Toots Lagoon wall while Stuart Ross stood by. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Carmel Valley doctor prepares for another globe-girdling trip

By FLORENCE MASON

FOR MOST people, exploring is the stuff of dreams. For a fortunate few, it is the reality of faraway places, or perhaps the excitement of investigating new ideas. For Dr. Donald McLean, it is both: Antarctica, Greenland, Alaska, Mount McKinley — and innovative microsurgery in a research laboratory.

Dr. McLean, a plastic surgeon, is now a resident of Carmel Valley. "It's our last stop," he said. But under his broad definition of exploring, there is no guarantee that he will not accept some new challenge soon.

McLean considers Greenland and Mount McKinley as his last 'real' exploring. But he looks upon the microsurgery he did in the research lab at the Navy Hospital in Oakland as exploration, too.

In fact, he and some friends have chartered a boat and will sail the west coast of Scotland this summer. The crew includes another Antarctic explorer, a man who was first mate on the same ship McLean sailed on to the Antarctic, local neurosurgeon Dr. Jan Belza, and a retired Marine Corps pilot of Carmel, James Parker. Adventurers, all.

When McLean was a boy, Admiral Richard Byrd was one of his heroes. He fell under the spell of National Geographic magazines, was captivated by ornithology and entomology and, at 16, got involved with falconry.

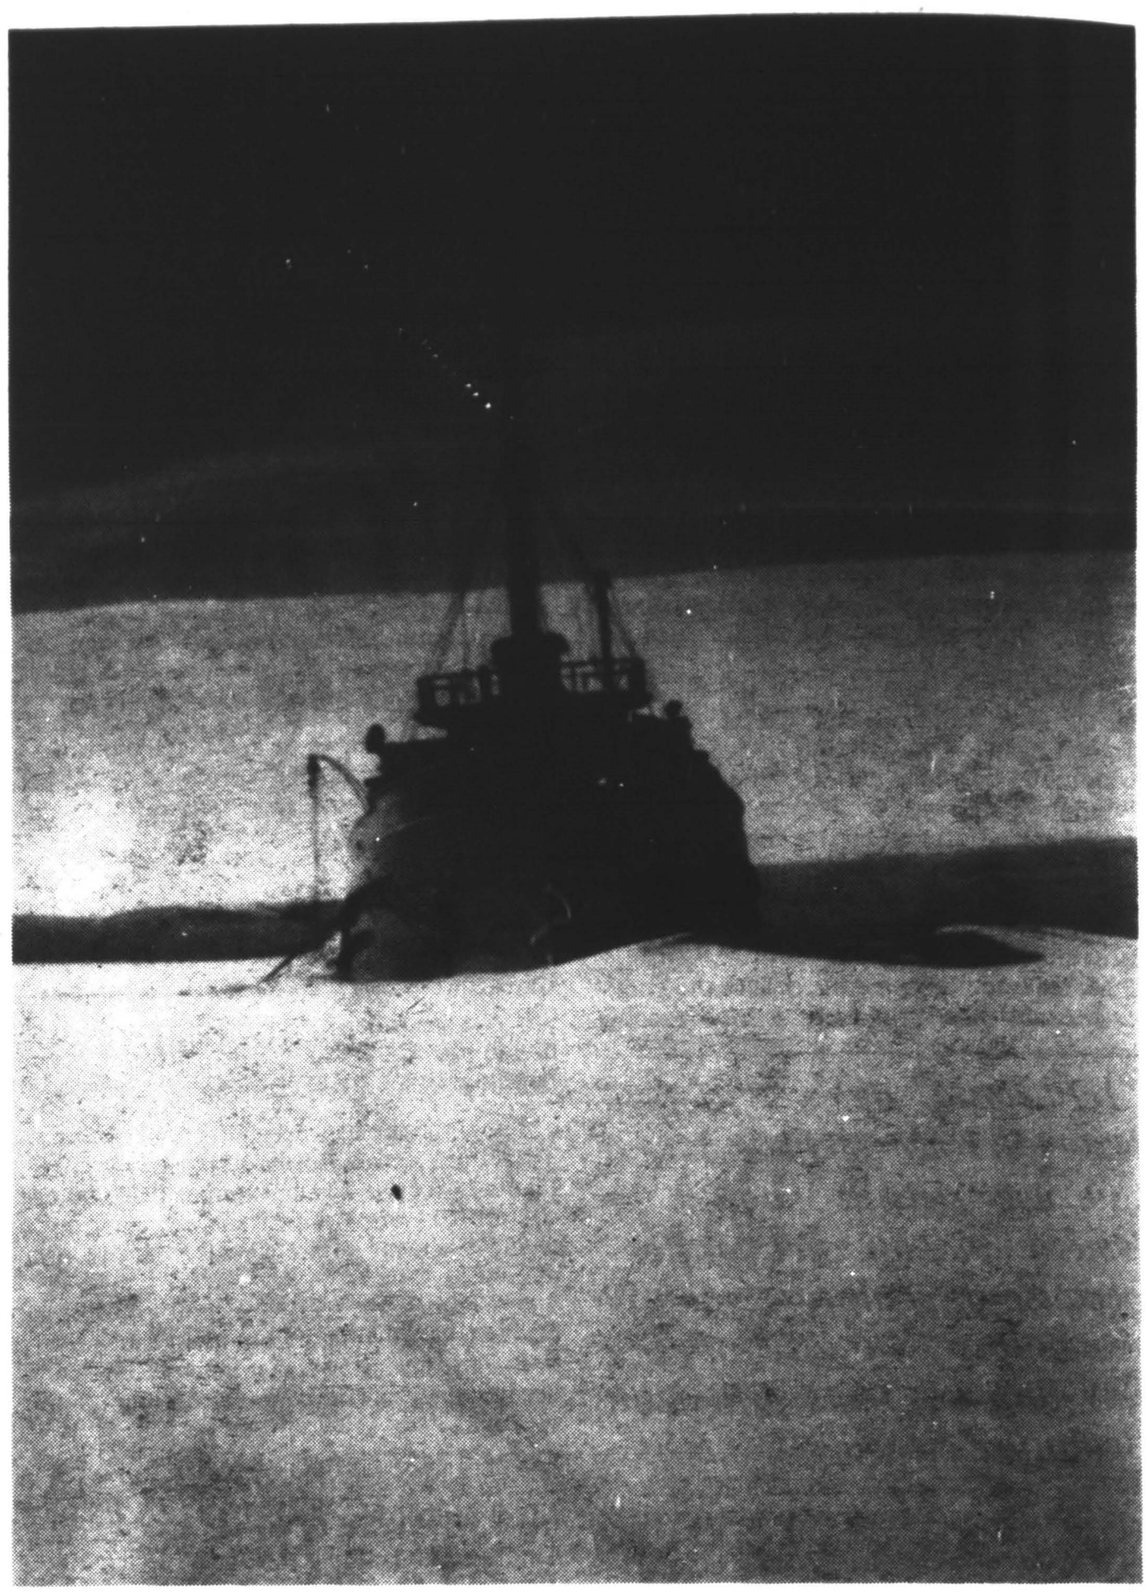
The sneak attack on Pearl Harbor and World War II set McLean on the two paths that have been his primary and parallel interests. He joined the Navy right after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and stayed on at Columbia College in New York City, where he was studying biology, for medical training under Navy auspices. Medicine, unexpectedly, led to exploring.

In 1946, during his civilian internship, McLean was invited to join an expedition to the Antarctic. It was sponsored by the New York-based American Geographic Society, and the invitation came to the young physician through a patient whose husband had been on an expedition with Admiral Byrd.

He went as a volunteer physician and biologist. "I did serve as a doctor," he said. "But with generally healthy humans (23 of them) and with 60 dogs who were often ill." He also served as a dog team driver, stood watch, and, on occasion, steered the ship.

The ship was a Navy net tender, which because it was made of wood was not affected by magnetic mines. It carried passengers and crew to the South American quadrant of the Antarctic, known as Palmer Land. After six weeks, the ship was frozen into the ice.

The explorers stayed in Byrd's old quarters for more than a year, explored the area with three planes, and took trimetrogon photographs of the sector. McLean summed up the contributions made by the group when he said: "We took the last thousand miles of dotted lines in the Waddell Sea off the map!"



LOCKED IN for a year, the Navy net tender on which Donald McLean traveled, was stuck with a wall of ice behind it.

He also said they had "set the base" for the geophysical year that came about five years later. That included cross-surface expeditions in the Antarctic; later the area was set aside as a non-military region to be used only for scientific purposes.

In his role on this expedition as biologist, McLean collected specimens for the Smithsonian Institution. For a time it looked as if the ship would remain frozen in the ice for a second year, when the ice didn't break up.

"But two Navy icebreakers came in through eight feet of ice," McLean said. "They broke the ship out and took us in tow. When they cut us loose, they sent a telegram to the rescued ship which said 'Goodbye, good luck, and God help you!' "

ALL OF THIS was accomplished without insurance on the ship. Lloyds of London was the only firm that would consider providing that insurance, and their verdict was: "The value of the ship, according to the Navy, is $1 million. The cost of your insurance will be $1 million." So the government finally let them go without it.

McLean's next adventure came courtesy of the U.S. Navy. He asked for duty in Greenland waters, and since not many Navy doctors wanted to be there, his superiors readily agreed. McLean spent several years in that area, met French explorer Paul Emile Victor and went with him to the Greenland ice cap for several months.

The young physician stayed with the Navy until after the Korean War, and then decided his destiny lay in Alaska. "I hadn't been there before, but I liked the Arctic and the Antarctic," he said. "I had been traveling in Europe and I needed to settle down long enough to make some money."

An additional reason for this practical consideration was that in Europe he had married. His wife, Mignonette, is a former concert dancer. She was excited about going to Alaska, although as it turned out "she didn't like it very much."

McLean organized an expedition to climb Mount McKinley via its northwest buttress. Actually, he responded to a challenge laid down years before by Frederick Cook, a famous explorer (and also a physician from New York) who failed in an attempt to climb that mountain via the same route, which had become known as "Cook's Shoulder."

Cook was a controversial figure who insisted he had successfully climbed the mountain by a different route, and later that he had reached the North Pole, a claim strongly disputed by Admiral Peary. In any event, it was Cook's statement that "there ain't no way to get there from here" that spurred Dr. McLean to say to himself: "That's something to try." He tried, and succeeded.

The next few years were busy ones for McLean, as he went through a residency in general surgery at Metropolitan Hospital in New York. The exploring bug was still biting, however: "I wanted to climb in the Himalayas, but my chief of surgery encouraged me to finish my residency." Eventually, he did get to travel in the Himalayas, if not to explore them.

After he completed his residency, McLean went back into the Navy and spent four years in Newport, R.I., where he met Dr. Gerald Martin, and through him came to the Monterey Peninsula. "I like it here; it's not too warm," McLean said. The friends now share a practice in Pacific Grove.

research lab at the Navy Hospital in Oakland as exploration, too.

"We prepared ourselves to be able to transfer digits (fingers and toes)," he explained. "We worked with rats first, because the blood vessels in their arteries are the same diameter as those in the human finger. Using a microscope, we amputated the rats' legs, then sewed them back on again. When the technique had been perfected, we published articles and went on to work with humans. Some failed, some succeeded, even in the early days. One major advantage in the successful cases was that it saved the patient often several weeks 'tied up' in an uncomfortable position in the hospital."

THE FIRST real success in this endeavor was published in 1971, and McLean — together with Dr. Harry Buncke of San Mateo and San Francisco — won the Ivy Award, given annually by the plastic surgeons' professional association. In one of the many significant "coincidences" in his life, Dr. McLean learned that his father and Dr. Buncke's father had gone to Columbia College together.

'But two Navy icebreakers came in through eight feet of ice. They broke the ship out and took us in tow. When they cut us loose, they sent a telegram to the rescued ship which said 'Goodbye, good luck, and God help you!' '

Donald McLean paused and smiled. He recalled an anecdote about this time in his life. "I was working on rats one morning each week, and seeing patients in the afternoon. While I was with a patient, the phone rang and I picked it up. A corpsman at the lab was calling and he said that a rat had expired. I said: 'That rat died?' It took some explanation by the Navy Wave who was assisting me to clarify to my patient that it was not another, unappreciated patient who had died, but one of our experimental subjects!"

The walls of Donald McLean's Carmel Valley home show off a collection of art from Haiti, where he had another adventure — this time with his family. He was appointed to the naval mission on the Caribbean island and managed to turn that into at least a "semi-exploration," flying in Navy helicopters here and there, "staying a day or so in each place and working as a general surgeon with the native doctors in very primitive conditions."

EXPLORER, physician, dog team driver Dr. Donald McLean as he explored the Antarctic in 1947.

The whole mission, composed mostly of U.S. Marines, was declared persona non grata by dictator Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, the self-imposed dictator-for-life, who was disenchanted with the mission "because we were disenchanted with him and the direction he was taking — toward becoming a despot, as we saw it." It was one of the few times in his life when Donald McLean could not say he had met the right person at the right time.

Now McLean is "semi-retired" and just practices plastic surgery in his office. His family includes three sons: Tor, who has his own energy conservation consulting business in the San Francisco Bay area; Hunt, a ski instructor at Val d'Isere in the French Alps (he summers in New Zealand, where he teaches skiing at Mount Cook); and Craig, a postgraduate student at the Art Center of Design in Pasadena.

Mignonette McLean likes to sail and ski, and the couple also bicycles together. Sailing has always been one of the doctor's delights: he has sailed up and down the California coast, off the San Juan islands, in the Caribbean and to Guatemala. Now he races Mercuries. And soon he'll be off to the coast of Scotland.

What does the future hold for this trim, tanned man who looks much younger than his 62 years? Don't rule out the possibility of more climbing or exploring. "It's open in the back of my mind," he said.

Seventh period approved for Carmel Middle School

CARMEL MIDDLE School students will face an extra class period next fall.

The Carmel Unified School District Board of Education brushed aside cost considerations and ordered on a 4-1 vote the implementation of the seven-period day.

Doyle Clayton, who has publicly supported the extra period, voted against the proposal because he is unsure the district can afford the estimated $90,000 to pay for the extra teachers and busing.

However, there may be other methods to implement the program at a minimal cost to the district, CUSD Business Manager Ed Miyasaki told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook after the meeting.

Miyasaki said there are alternative plans to start the seven-period day.

The most expensive is to add time to the day to allow for the extra 55-minute class, he said.

The district would have to hire three teachers since the existing contract states that teachers only must be in class five periods per day. And the transportation schedule would have to be revamped because middle school classes would be dismissed later, Miyasaki said.

However, the board may want to negotiate with teachers another plan that would be far less costly, he said.

That plan would eliminate several minutes from each class to provide the extra time for another class. Teachers then would teach the same amount of hours, but would have six rather than five classes per day, he said.

That proposal, however, will have to be negotiated with teachers during contract talks this summer.

Miyasaki and other district administrators are expected to prepare a comprehensive proposal for submission to trustees in August.

Trustees have adopted a technically-balanced $6.7 million 1984-85 budget. But the budget does not include money for the middle school seven-period day.

And, the budget does not include funds for a reserve (usually about $100,000), nor does it allocate any money for staff pay raises (about $50,000 for each 1 percent pay hike).

Supervisors rebuff Carmel pleas, approve Mission Ranch rezoning

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors rebuffed pleas from the city of Carmel Tuesday and approved a rezoning for the Mission Ranch property just south of the city limits.

Supervisors on a 3-1 vote June 19 approved rezoning the property to allow for a clustered residential development of not more than 65 units on the 21-acre site. About 4.6 acres were determined to be wetlands and cannot be developed.

The city council — through assistant planning director Diane White — argued that supervisors should prepare an environmental impact report for the rezoning.

However, a majority of the supervisors agreed that the proper time for an EIR is during review of the actual project proposal.

In favor of the rezoning were Supervisors William Peters of Carmel Valley, Barbara Shipnuck and Chairman Michal Moore. Supervisor Dusan Petrovic opposed the rezoning.

The Mission Ranch Corp. has submitted a tentative tract map to the planning department that envisions 45 single-family homes and 16 condominium units.

The development would demolish the Mission Ranch Resort motel units, farmhouse and barn.

Harrison Memorial Library to open Sundays

HARRISON Memorial Library will once again be open on Sundays starting in August thanks to an extra $6,000 contributed by the Carmel City Council.

The board of trustees, which had ordered the library closed on Sundays about two years ago as a money-saving measure, agreed June 19 to add the extra hours on a trial basis and only until the special council-provided fund is depleted.

The city council, which long supported the Sunday opening, decided in a special budget session June 18 to provide the $6,000 it will take to keep the library open on Sundays.

Library Director Peg Richter told trustees she will need until early August before the library can open on Sundays. She wants to hire three new part-time workers and develop the times the library is to be open that day.

Harrison Memorial Library had been open on Sundays from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., but she is uncertain whether those hours will be reinstituted.

Free speech issue develops out of library feud

THE LATEST controversy over the much-delayed Harrison Memorial Library annex has prompted an interesting exchange of letters between Councilman Robert Stephenson and citizen Howard Nieman.

Nieman started the post office box correspondence with a letter intended for Councilman David Maradei that also was addressed to the other council members.,

Nieman and his mother, Jane, are the instigators of a petition to be presented to the council soon. The petition, which has more than 125 signatures of area business people and residents, opposes the council plan to build a library annex directly on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Sixth avenues.

In his first letter to Maradei, Nieman chastized the councilman for his public comments on a mass-mailed flyer that opposes the Lincoln Street annex plan.

Although Nieman disavows knowledge of who sent the flyer, he took exception to Maradei's complaints about the mailing of the flyer and its lack of return address.

Stephenson steamed when he received a copy of the Nieman letter to Maradei and decided to take matters into his own hands, or rather, pen.

Stephenson is perturbed about Nieman's complaints that the council has tried to suppress free speech, refuses to listen to citizens, and has not presented the true facts about the library annex.

Nieman wrote: "As a member of the American Civil Liberties Union, I have long been a strong champion of the free speech movement and of First Amendment rights, and whenever I hear a public official speak of restriction or diminution of First Amendment rights, as you did, I feel compelled to express my views."

Nieman "expressed deep concern" about Maradei's June 5 comment that he is "sick and tired" of the mail being used to distribute "inaccurate" information.

"This group used the mails to inform the voters of Carmel about an absurd proposal by the city council that would materially change our city," Nieman wrote.

"I happen to share their viewpoint and feel they should be applauded for their concern over Carmel's future."

Nieman found Maradei's remarks "very disturbing."

"I found your remarks very disturbing considering your position in the postal service, and I do not feel that someone in your position, who serves the people of Carmel in the dual role of postal station manager and city councilman, should make any comment whatsoever on what is or is not a proper use of the mails."

NIEMAN said Maradei's views "indicate to me a lack of respect for the First Amendment rights of the people of Carmel, and you apparently do not wish for us to be kept informed except by our elected officials or persons known to you."

Nieman claims that his discussions with other citizens have found little support for the council.

"I have found no support whatsoever for the council's proposal and uniform disgust with the leadership demonstrated by this council."

Nieman continued that the city should not spend tax dollars on concept plans until after residents have an opportunity to protest.

"I suspect that any member of the council who continues to support this proposal will find re-election a difficult process," the letter concluded.

Nieman's comments spurred Stephenson, rather than Maradei, to write a reply.

Stephenson agreed with Maradei that an anonymous flyer is "meaningless."

"Fictitious names are sometimes deliberately misleading, being carefully constructed to give an impression opposed to their true purpose," Stephenson wrote in a letter of rebuttal.

"If 'The Committee to Preserve Carmel' is in truth for that purpose, why are they unwilling to come forth and discuss their position?" Stephenson asked.

Stephenson presented two pages of facts about the annex proposal that have been discussed and made public previously. That listing was in response to Nieman's complaints that the council has not provided the public with the facts.

Stephenson invited Nieman to stop by and read the traffic engineers' report on the impact closing Lincoln Street will have on circulation.

The councilman explained that a separate annex on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue — which was the original city plan — is too expensive.

Stephenson also pointed out that the annex is needed, it is just the location that is under debate in the council.

"It is a positive need, not an idle wish," he wrote.

Stephenson wrote that there have been numerous council sessions on the proposal and that a town forum was conducted before the November election.

Additionally, the two council members and Mayor Charlotte Townsend all supported an annex (they disagreed on location) and were re-elected in April, Stephenson reminded Nieman.

But the letter feud is expected to end soon. Stephenson, in his letter, invited Nieman to a lunch.

Nieman, in a subsequent letter, accepted Stephenson's invitation.

'I found your remarks very disturbing considering your position in the postal service, and I do not feel that someone in your position, who serves the people of Carmel in the dual role of postal station manager and city councilman, should make any comment whatsoever on what is or is not a proper use of the mails.'

Superintendent appeals to businesses for help

By MICHAEL GARDNER

ARE YOU a businessperson who would like to help the public schools but who isn't quite sure what to do or how to go about it?

Well, Carmel Unified School District Supt. William Rand is ready to show you how.

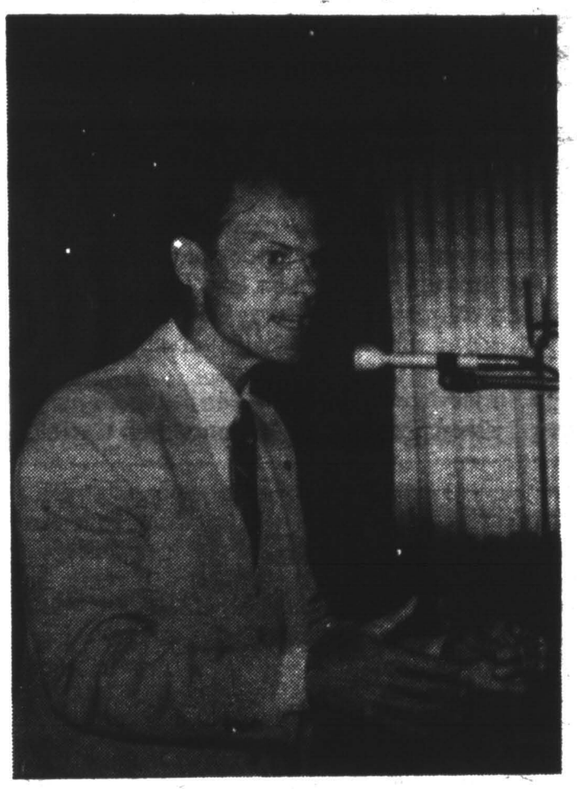
That was the message Rand stressed in a brief talk before a sparse Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce luncheon crowd at the Holiday Inn June 13.

"I can think of eight or nine ways we can work together and I'm sure if we sat down in small groups we could come up with another 100," Rand told the 15 chamber members.

Rand's message focused on a new program called "adopt-a-school" that is "tremendously successful" in San Diego County and just now is getting underway locally.

"Carmel schools would like a handshake rather than handout," said Rand in reciting the slogan of the adopt-a-school program. "You people are an untapped resource that can help our students achieve more."

Under the adopt-a-school program, businesses can allow students to work in the store, bank or office to learn more about private enterprise. Students earn units toward graduation, rather than money, for their work, Rand explained.



SUPT. WILLIAM RAND spent a luncheon with the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce telling the business group how members can help the Carmel Unified School District. (Photo by Michael Gardner.)

For example, one high school student worked at the Dick Bruhn clothing store in downtown Carmel six hours a week for six weeks, he said.

Larger businesses could allow employees "release time" to go to schools and tutor or be guest speakers, Rand suggested.

Workers could help in a similar volunteer capacity as did several parents at Tularcitos Elementary School in Carmel Valley, he said. Those parents developed a science lab and a series of field trips.

"You don't have to give us dollars. You can provide us with your expertise," Rand emphasized.

Employers will gain from the program by better public relations with the community, an understanding of the school system, plus "an opportunity to enrich a student's life," he said.

Businesses can also help by sponsoring recognition awards, such as the annual Carmel Valley Rotary Club dinner for the top 100 high school scholars; or the annual Monterey Peninsula Foundation Allen Griffin award for the outstanding teacher of the year, Rand said.

On recognition of teachers and students, Rand said: "We're pretty low right now and we shouldn't be. You can help us by insisting on high standards right across the board from the students to the superintendent."

THE DISTRICT could also use donations of equipment, which in most cases are tax-deductible, Rand said.

For example, a business just recently donated several word processors to the central office, which "has been operating in the 1940s" in terms of equipment, he said.

Rand acknowledged that public schools need to improve but said they will get better with the cooperation of the community and business.

Rand's talk spanned several different school-related topics, was candid and punctuated with a few jokes.

But on the subject of performance of the public schools, Rand was quite serious.

"Education in California, in general, has been declining over the last 10 years," he said.

"People you've been hiring out there haven't been able to do the job. That's a scary thing."

Rand recalled one story he heard about a large computer firm that was being courted by many different states during its search for a new home.

The criteria for a location listed by the corporation included recreation, affordable housing, quality of life, access to major universities, and good public schools, Rand said.

California — even with its strong state college and university systems — lost its bid to Texas because of the public education system in that state.

"I'm ashamed to say that that criteria wiped out most of the states," Rand said.

Rand said that there has been an "irrefutable" decline in public schools. "Part of the reason for this decline is the lowering of standards across the board."

Rand said the decline also can be attributed to the financial crunch. However, he said it is time that public educators "stopped singing about the problem and acted."

Two ways "Carmel has responded to that challenge" are through a "peer school excellence" program and the "essentials of instruction" project, Rand said.

The "peer excellence program" to be implemented this fall at the high school will redefine the mission of the school and revamp programs to meet the goals established by the school board for a secondary education, he said.

And an "essentials of education" project is a series of workshops that teaches teachers better methods to help students learn.

Rand pointed out that Carmel schools cannot necessarily be lumped into the "declining" category.

He recited results of the recent Scholastic Aptitude Test and California Assessment Program test in which Carmel students scored in the top percentiles.

Big Sur Spring Sing

SHARON JONES, music specialist for the Carmel Unified School District, led kindergarten and first grade children in the 11th annual Spring Sing at Captain Cooper School in Big Sur. The program included bells, recorders, an instrumental ensemble, and the singing of rounds. The Spring Sing tradition began in 1973 when mudslides from the previous winter had blocked the entrance to the Big Sur Grange Hall and forced cancellation of the Christmas program. Tor House Festival set for Oct. 6 and 7

Oct. 6 and 7 have been set as the dates for the Sixth Annual Robinson Jeffers Tor House Festival, the Tor House Foundation announced.

The public is invited to the festival, which is conducted each year to celebrate the life and works of poet Robinson Jeffers.

Providing the setting for many of the Festival activities will be Tor House, located on Ocean View on Carmel Point, where Jeffers lived from 1919 until his death in 1962.

Highlights of the festival will include seminars about Jeffers and his poetry, tours of Tor House and Hawk Tower, a poetry walk and a gala champagne reception at Tor House. It is followed by dinner at the Hacienda Carmel at the entrance to Carmel Valley.

An all-inclusive ticket is $100 (non-members); $75 (members). A ticket for admission to the reception and dinner only costs $35. Seminar tickets are $10 each and non-reservation house tours cost $7.

Proceeds from the festival and from all Tor House Foundation activities are used for the preservation of Tor House, its gardens and grounds. The foundation is affiliated with the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Carmel City Council approves new planning law

THE CARMEL City Council endured name-calling, open threats of recall and a six-hour marathon session June 19 to pass the implementng ordinances to the general plan.

The council unanimously approved the first reading of ordinances intended to control tourist-oriented businesses, such as motels, restaurants, art galleries and gift shops.

The ordinances will be considered for a second and final reading when the council meets at 4 p.m. July 3 at city hall. If the ordinances are adopted that afternoon, the regulations will become effective Aug. 3.

The ordinances have drawn the wrath of some of the more vocal members of the business community who will be affected by the stringent regulations.

The most-discussed provision has been a redrawing of the central commercial zone.

Several attorneys and business people protested a new boundary that changes the southern half of some street blocks between Ocean and Seventh avenues from central-commercial to service-commercial.

For example, the Leidig family owns the Mobile gas station on the northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Seventh Avenue. Under the old zoning, they would be allowed to build a retail complex filled with tourist-serving shops.

Under the new proposal the site is in the commercial-service district. Any new retail shops would be subject to stringent conditions. Some businesses, such as art galleries and jewelry shops, would be prohibited.

Glenn Leidig blasted the boundary change and said the property has been in the central commercial district ever since the city first adopted a zoning ordinance more than half a century ago.

Leidig said the planners must have gone to the colleges of "zig-zag and gerrymandering."

That language was tame compared to what financial planner Stephan Zimmermann of Carmel Valley told the council.

He claimed that some of the angry business people would take "whatever methods necessary" to ensure that the zoning regulations are not implemented.

Zimmermann mentioned "recalling" and added: "The people in this town may consider that."

Paul Laub, local businessman who lives in Carmel Valley, blasted the ordinances as "un-American" and "facist."

Variety of summer activities offered at CV Youth Center

THE FIRST "Music at the Park" concert is only one of many summer activities now underway at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center.

Summer activities sponsored by the youth center range from the concert to swimming lessons to a full-scale day camp for kids.

The center also has scheduled the election of its board of directors. The annual membership drive is underway and the search for a new paid director continues.

The Coastridge Boys will present the "Music at the Park" concert from noon until 4 p.m. Saturday, June 23 at the community center on Ford Road.

Hot dogs, hamburgers and beverages will be on sale. A special feature will be a drawing for a trip for two to Reno, Nev. Proceeds from the raffle will be used to purchase a plaque for the Marie Tedrow memorial rose garden in the park.

Registration still is open for sessions of the summer day camp for area kids in grades kindergarten through fifth grade. Cost is $40 weekly or $10 per day for part-time participation. A minimum of two days per week is required.

Camp activities will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at the youth center. Phyllis Thorngate-Keel is the supervisor and she will be assisted by Dawn McKay. Terry Heath is one of the teen counselors.

Activities will include arts and crafts, field trips, swimming and cooking lessons.

Sessions are limited to 35 students so parents are urged to register their children early. The first session will begin June 25.

The swimming pool at the youth center is now open for daily recreational swimming and lessons.

Recreational swimming is available from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. daily. Cost is $1.25.

Lessons for all ages and abilities are available. Costs for the one to three week sessions are: $20 for the first session, $15 for the second and $10 for the third.

Master swim classes for adults are from noon to 1 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Cost is $1.25 per session.

A new youth center board will be elected during the annual general meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 27 at the center.

The nominating committee recommends that the following nine members be elected: Fred Slabaugh, Bob Heald, Mel Pritchard, Marsha Olsen, Tina Plascencia, Lucy Morris, Mark Heath, Jib Bowie and Holly Decker.

Membership dues can be renewed or new members can join by sending $25 (patron) or $5 (sponsor) to the center at P.O. Box 124, Carmel Valley, Calif. 93924.

The board of directors continues its search for a paid part-time director to oversee the youth center activities. Applications can be mailed to the above address and must be submitted by June 30.

The Kiwanis Club earlier this month completed the planting of 540 African daisies at the northeast end of the park.

For more information on the activities, call the center at 659-9954.

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

After lengthy debate

County may decide Valley Master Plan

By MICHAEL GARDNER

TWO FAR-reaching plans that will implement controls on development in the unicorporated areas of Carmel, Carmel Valley and south to Malpaso Creek will be addressed by Montery County officials next week.

The much-debated draft Carmel Valley Master Plan will be discussed by the board of supervisors when it meets at 2 p.m. Tuesday, June 26 in the Monterey County Courthouse in Salinas.

Twenty-four hours later in the same room, the county planning commission is to tackle the proposed Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan when it meets at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 27.

Supervisors actually may complete hearings on the master plan June 26.

The major item left to be tackled is a report from planning staff on the complex development allocation system and its trigger mechanism, front-end loading system and sliding windows.

If supervisors can agree on the mechanisms, they could complete the hearings and approve a resolution of intent to adopt the master plan, senior planner Dave Young told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook June 18.

"Hopefully they're going to wrap up everything," Young said.

If the resolution of intent is approved, a final resolution and findings would be presented to the board at its next meeting, Young explained.

The key to final passage is the allocation system for new development.

The allocation mechanism was put off to next Tuesday after Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley and First District Supervisor Marc Del Piero voiced concerns at the June 5 meeting of the board.

Peters and Del Piero complained that the so-called sliding window provision of the master plan would allow developers to double — or perhaps even triple — the amount of subdivided lots in Carmel Valley during the first several years.

The sliding window provision would allow supervisors to approve more than 55 units during a single year as long as the " five-year average" number of units approved does not exceed 55.

Thus, a large amount of units could be approved the first year rather than having development spaced out over a longer period of time, Peters and Del Piero reason.

A planning commission proposal — deemed "front-end loading" — is tied to the sliding window concept of 55 new units annually.

The draft master plan states that the total buildout in the Valley to be allowed should be 2,100 units during the proposed 20-year life of the planning document. Thus, an annual allocation would be 55 units.

A PROPOSED 3,800-unit development on the Rancho San Carlos property (above) in the hills south of Carmel Valley Road would be restricted to 500 units under a density proposal included in the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan. The Monterey County Planning Commission will continue its public hearing on the area plan when it meets at 2:30 p.m. June 27 in the Montery County Courthouse in Salinas. (Photo by Michael Gardner.)

HOWEVER, in 1980 Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver suspended implementation of the original master plan. The city of Carmel sued over the 1980 master plan on the basis it did not adequately address the impact of development on the Carmel Valley environment.

The planning commission has recommended that up to 413 lots be allowed in the first two years of the master plan life to make up for the time that elapsed because of the court-ordered moratorium.

That proposal has been labeled "front-end loading" by county officials.

Meanwhile, the Monterey County Planning Commission has a planning document of its own to worry about.

Commissioners at their June 13 session accepted public testimony on several aspects of the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, which encompasses an area bounded by the Salinas River to the north, Laureles Grade to the east, Malpaso Creek to the south and the Pacific Ocean to the west.

The focal point of the meeting is expected to be the impact of the plan on a proposed development at Rancho San Carlos in Carmel Valley.

The plan was assailed by Rancho San Carlos attorney Brian Finegan during the June 13 public hearing.

The Oppenheimer family wants to develop 3,800 clustered housing units on 2,500 acres of the ranch property in the Carmel Valley hills south of Carmel Valley Road near Robinson Canyon Road.

The proposed development would include 17,500 acres of open space, including 6,300 acres that is to be deeded as part of Garland Ranch Regional Park.

The development would be completely self-contained with its own water supply, sewage treatment facility and private access road, according to preliminary plans.

But the proposed Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan would restrict the allowable development on the Rancho San Carlos Property.

The citizens advisory committee that developed the proposed plan recommends that the density for Rancho San Carlos be limited to one unit per 40 acres. The units also would have to be "clustered" to ensure the greatest amount of open space.

The density for Rancho San Carlos in the already-adopted Monterey County General Plan is one unit for each 10 acres, or 2,000 homes.

If supervisors eventually adopt the 40-acre density restriction, the Rancho San Carlos development would be restricted to 500 units, or 3,300 less than originally planned.

If supervisors can agree on the mechanisms, they could complete the hearings and approve a resolution of intent to adopt the master plan, senior Dave Young told the Carmel Pine Cone/ Carmel Valley Outlook June 18.

However, the citizens committee has recommended that Rancho San Carlos be allowed to proceed with its plans for a 200-unit motel and adjacent golf course.

The committee has expressed concerns about the potential impacts the development will have on water supply, traffic and air quality.

Finegan is expected to attend the public hearing to ask commissioners to loosen the density requirements.

THE VALLEY SAGE

BY VICTORIA ANDREWS

Curious hominid horse show behavior

SMALL MINDS, small wonders. Most people would agree that the sight of a gleaming horse and graceful rider is one of the more elegant spectacles on the sporting scene.

The harmony of the human/equine team has evoked poetic raptures for centuries. So what happens to this joyous esprit when the pair appears for a horse show?

The more obvious aspect of the equestrian challenge — testing the capabilities of rider and mount against others and against the judge's eye — is not at issue here, as it probably poses no greater threat to civilized living than baseball and is more interesting.

The issue of the moment is the covert conduct of hominids at horse shows, a behavior which ranks high on the list of Western curiosities. To try to understand the ritual is hazardous enough to send anthropologists back to the safety of New Guinea.

Carmel Valley counts as its own some of the more interesting and talented people to be found anywhere. Many are involved with horses as well. Of that group, most are kind and reasonable beings nearly everywhere — except at horse shows.

Not all these kind and interesting equestrians permute to ringside demons but many do — enough that the author of Invasion of the Body Snatchers may have been inspired by a horse show. To wit: Your trail companion and dinner guest of last week appears at the showground resplendent in attire astride her lustered mount. "Good morning! You look great, both of you," is your cheery salutation. A frozen what-planet-did-you-drop-from stare is your response.

A barn-brained teenager laments to an adult stable friend and fellow exhibitor: "I know I'll forget the course. I'm sooo nervous."

"You ought to be," he answers with a mystifying sneer and gallops off to joke with the judge.

EGOS have been fragile things since long before Freud labelled them. Like balloons with teeth, these frail structures bump each other and explode without warning, spooking the air and occasionally, at horse shows, the horses.

Oddly, the local shows seem to engender greater neuroses than larger scale productions, perhaps because there's no anonymity and nowhere to hide from community vampires who change from blood brothers and sisters on Thursday to blood suckers on Sunday.

It matters little to them whether a performance has been good or not; the arias have a predictable vibrato: 'S/he ruined the horse...paid too much for it...took lessons from Godzilla....' Remarkably, the horses usually take it pretty much in stride.

Parent effectiveness training often shows its darker side, too, as the family ego forgets its manners.

"Isn't that braid job awful?" was a remark overheard as a parent spoke to her daughter not of Bo Derek gone punk but about the daughter's friend's horse, as friend and horse re-entered the arena to accept a ribbon.

And what of poor Wilbur who wasn't so keen to enter the fray to begin with, but was cajoled with: "It'll be fun, dear. We'll all come and watch. Just go in there and have a good time."

So Wilbur gathered his nerve and his reins and steered his pony around the course, only to be told later, "Well, you blew it again. I warned you about that fence, but you never listen." Goodbye, Wilbur.

IN A DIFFERENT area of competition, kudos are due two Carmel Valley residents who recently passed the California Bar exam. Christoper Cayce and Robin Beare, both 1983 graduates of the Monterey College of Law, were formally admitted to the Bar in a June 13 ceremony in the Monterey City Council Chambers at which Superior Court Judge John Anton presided.

Camp Lazy Oaks, a nature camp in the Valley for children four to six years old, is scheduled to begin June 19. The program will be directed by Diane Tarp, a credentialed elementary teacher with extensive experience in science and nature workshops, including Joseph Cornell's "Sharing Nature with Children," "Project Wild," and "Exploring Wildlife Communities with Children."

Mrs. Tarp's emphasis is on offering the young child an understanding and appreciation of the environment through exploring selected relevant topics each week.

Among the specialists who will work with the campers are Jud Vandevere, a river and nature authority who had taught programs through Monterey Peninsula College and the Lyceum, and Lisa Hoefler, director of the Wildlife Refuge Center and the SPCA. Also, Bill Bernard will offer his expertise on Indian culture, including religion and artifacts.

The camp runs continuously through August and offers two four-hour sessions each week — either Monday and Wednesday and Tuesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Mrs. Tarp suggests a visit to the camp at 17 Los Helechos, on the Carmel River for prospective campers and parents. She may be reached at 659-3387.

And back to the horse show circuit: Dressage disciples should note that a California Dressage Society-recognized show is scheduled in Carmel Valley July 28 at Stonegate Stables. The upbeat event will offer classes from training level through level IV, and will feature musical kurs from level I through IV. The judge will be Jane Jackson of Solano Beach. For more information, call Mary Moiso soon at 659-3223 because entries close July 1.

Out of the arena into the hills...The Carmel Valley Trails Association is gathering an active and enthusiastic membership throughout the Valley. The association purpose is to preserve and expand a network of hiking and riding trails for public use.

The group has the support of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District which has agreed to take over maintenance of the trails as soon as the extended system is established.

If you would like more information about how to help, call 659-3745 or 659-3406.

CV subdivision squeaks by planners

A PLAN to subdivide 273 acres of agricultural land into three parcels so the property deep in Carmel Valley can be sold barely squeaked by the Monterey County Planning Commission June 13.

Commissioners on a 4-3 vote allowed George Jercich of Watsonville to divide the property into parcels of 117, 86.6 and 70 acres. The property, which will remain agricultural/permanent grazing, is in the Arroyo Seco area east of Carmel Valley Road.

Commissioners were divided on the issue because three were concerned that the parcels would be "too small for viable farming operations," Planning Director Robert Slimmon told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook after the meeting.

In support of the proposal were Commissioners Peter Cailotto, Thomas Mill, Calvin Reaves and Manuel Jimenez. Opposed were Louis Calcagno, Lynn Riddle and David Hendrick.

Commissioners Gary Varga and Tom Glau arrived late and did not participate in the vote, Slimmon explained.

The three parcels cannot be residentially developed because the property falls under the Williamson Act which guarantees that agricultural land remains zoned for farming, Slimmon said.

In another matter June 13, commissioners delayed action on an appeal by Newton Cope that asks to overturn a staff interpretation of the Del Monte Forest Land Use Plan that prohibits building "under the drip line" of a Cypress Grove on 17 Mile Drive, Pebble Beach.

Commissioners will tour the site June 22 and review the issue again on June 27.

Cope argues that the Cypress Grove is so heavily forested that it is impossible to build under the drip line, which is the area that spans to the farthest end of the tree branches.

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

Carmel River lawsuit settled

A TRIAL to settle the legal feud between John and Alice Randazzo of Carmel Valley and Monterey County was narrowly averted last week when the two sides agreed to settle the fight out of court. Under the agreement, the Randazzos agreed to pay the county $3,000 and remove within 90 days the "unsuitable" riprap and other material they placed along the Carmel River (above) late last year to protect their property against damage from winter storms. The county sued last December to force the Randazzos to remove the riprap. The county contended that the "trash" mixed with the riprap posed a hazard to the river environment. The Randazzos also did not get the necessary permits to dump the 50,000 yards of fill material along the river bank. The Randazzos insisted they have a right to protect their property. The Randazzos can go ahead with plans to revegetate the banks, the agreement stated. The Randazzo property is on the south side of Carmel Valley Road about three miles east of Robinson Canyon Road. The property is directly across from the slide area that forced the closure of Carmel Valley Road about 15 months ago. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Winery generates complaints to directors of CVPOA

By VICTORIA ANDREWS

ON THE heels of its recent grand opening, Chateau Julien is the object of scorn once again. The new Carmel Valley winery, which to date has created more local controversy than wine, has angered Valley residents who in turn have complained to the Carmel Valley Property Owners' Association.

At the June 13 CVPOA board meeting at St. Dunstan's Church, president Robert Greenwood opened discussion of the winery's latest affronts, specifically the advertisement of a "public invitational" wine tasting. The advertisement has been displayed in local newspapers as well as on a large sign on Carmel Valley Road.

Greenwood said he understood that any wine tasting sanctioned by the county use permit was to be private and for members of the trade only. He added that Monterey County Planning Director Robert Slimmon had clarified the conditions of the use permit which, according to Greenwood, "did not contemplate entertainment."

Slimmon told the Carmel Pine Cone/-Carmel Valley Outlook that shortly after the winery opened, when he was county zoning administrator, he had written to the winery to remind owners about the commercial invitation restriction. Slimmon also said the high price of Chateau Julien wine suggested that public tastings would be impractical.

He added that a couple of wine classes per year would probably not violate the use permit but said tour buses to the winery would not be allowed. He noted that the county is aware of the situation and is reviewing it.

Another objection surrounding Chateau Julien concerns exterior lighting which many residents have compared unfavorably to an airport landing strip. Steve Slade, aide to Fifth District Supervisor William Peters, told the CVPOA that the county has taken a "wait and see" position on the lighting issue until the newly planted landscaping has had a chance to grow and thus reduce the glare from the offending lights.

Director Todd Wahle noted that the Carmel Valley Master Plan hearings by county supervisors appear to be drawing to a close. The next and possibly final public hearing is at 2 p.m., June 26, before the county adopts the plan.

Director Gerry Foote commented about the long-awaited acceptance of the plans. "It's mostly a one-man show. Bill Peters is 90 percent of getting the plan through."

Greenwood tendered his resignation as CVPOA board president, and cited long-standing travel plans and professional commitments through next year in Brazil. Also, vice president Glenn Chang has retired from the board because of poor health.

Anne McGowan was appointed to fill Mrs. Chang's seat on the nominating committee. Pat Sorri will serve as acting president until the board selects officers for the positions left vacant by Greenwood and Mrs. Chang.

Hearings scheduled on three CV projects

MONTEREY COUNTY Zoning Administrator Dale Ellis will conduct public hearings on three separate small projects in Carmel Valley on June 28 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Sally McPhail has applied for a use permit to convert a three-car garage to an approximately 600 sq. ft. granny house adjacent to her Hatton Road home.

As part of the proposed project she also has applied for a variance to the 12 foot height limit on granny houses and a variance on the setback requirements. The hearing is scheduled for 1:40 p.m.

Vincent DiLorenzo has applied for a use permit to allow for a caretaker's quarters on his property near Via la Naranga, upper Carmel Valley.

DiLorenzo will be asked to provide information on the need for the unit, available water supply and sewage capacity. The hearing is set for 2:05 p.m.

Paul Franks has asked for a two-foot height variance for a residence in the Cachagua area, north of Cachagua Road.

The site is in the scenic conservation zone, which has a height limit of 20 feet. The hearing has been scheduled for 1:40 p.m.

FOCUS wants to reach every Carmel student

By MICHAEL GARDNER

KEN WHITE, borrowing a phrase made by those long distance telephone commercials, says one of his major objectives as new president of the Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS) is to "reach into every classroom and touch every student."

White, the former president of the board of education, was named head of FOCUS during a June 13 meeting of the board. He replaces Pat Sippel.

Other officers selected are: Brian Kelly, vice-president; Bob Giraudo, treasurer; Judy Kirk, secretary; and Pat Sippel, corresponding secretary.

FOCUS is a non-profit community organization established five years ago as a financial support group for the Carmel school district.

White's goals for FOCUS include a broader-based board membership, more support directly to the classroom, and to get business more active in the schools, he told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook June 14.

'I think the community is generally aware that we have a good school district, but I do think they need to be more aware of the specific accomplishments. We can help communicate that to the public.

"The one thing I'd like to see us pay very close attention to is spending more money directly in the classroom where the students will directly benefit," White said.

Such projects would include purchases of books, reference materials and supplies, he said.

"We want to get into as many classrooms as the support will allow us," he added.

"The catchwords we're saying is that we want to reach into every classroom and touch someone," said White in reference to the telephone commercial slogan: "Reach out and touch someone."

Another of White's goals is to get a more diversified membership on the FOCUS board, which now has six vacancies.

"The FOCUS board is going to try to diversify its membership. If you're not careful, you'll get a homogeneous group.

"You tend to clump together. We're trying to break out of that clump and become a more diversified board."

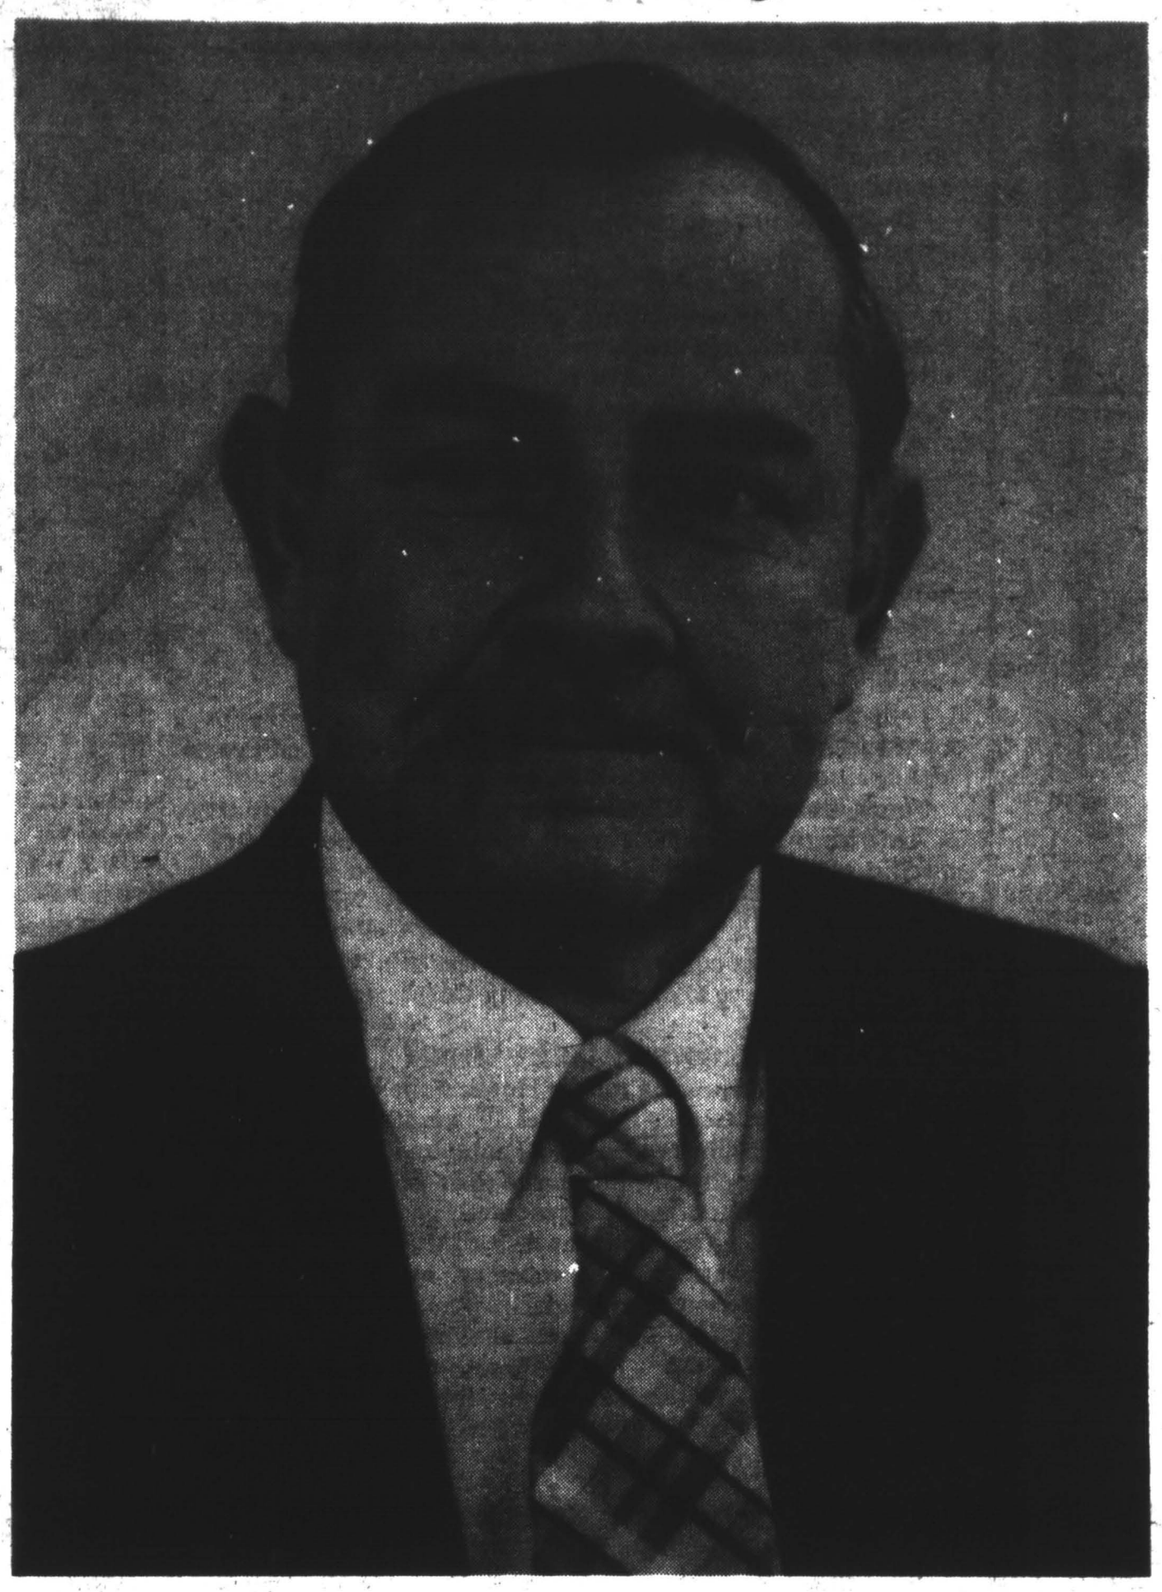
For example, White said the board would like representation for Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley.

FOCUS should work toward getting business more involved in the district, he believes.

"These businesses are hiring our kids. They have a strong stake in our schools," White said.

FOCUS should also work with other school support groups, he added.

"We're hopefully going to be working with parent groups more closely. I'd like to see the President's Council (representatives of each parent group) become stronger and improve communication."



KEN WHITE, former president of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education, has been named as the new president of the Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS). (Photo by Michael Gardner.)

WHIITE ALSO wants to see better public relations for the schools and FOCUS.

"I think the community is generally aware that we have a good school district, but I do think they need to be more aware of the specific accomplishments," he said. "We can help communicate that to the public."

FOCUS also needs to become more visible to the public, White said

"We want to make the community more aware of what FOCUS is doing and enlist their support," he said.

As part of his plans to make FOCUS more visible, White wants an annual fund raiser for the service group.

"We need a yearly event that people can schedule and look forward to as part of a good opportunity to support our schools and to have a good time too," he said.

A FOCUS committee is getting ready for a special celebration/fund raiser tentatively scheduled for October.

"We're going to call it our fifth birthday party. It's going to be a celebration. A special fund raising celebration," White explained.

But even with all of the new goals, FOCUS will not drop its continued support of three major school programs — music, middle school after school sports, and computer education.

"FOCUS will continue its support of music education. We believe strongly in that. We started with that," White said. "That was and is a critical FOCUS objective."

The music program dipped to about 20 students several years ago, but now has more than 100 enrolled at the middle and high schools, White said.

FOCUS also plans to support the development of computer labs at the middle and high schools. And, the after school sports programs for the sixth through eighth graders will continue to be financially supported, he said.

Another thing that will not change is the FOCUS policy of neutrality on issues before the school board, White added.

"Absolutely, we are not in any way going to become political. It is not our job to determine how the schools are run. That's the job of the school board," he said.

FOCUS also will continue its policy that all requests for purchases must first be supported by the school principal, then the district superintendent before it is reviewed by the grants committee.

It also must be determined that the school district cannot afford the purchase, he said.

"Darn few" requests are denied by the board because the system is designed so that only the needy and principal-supported requests get to FOCUS, White said.

FOCUS grants have risen annually to the 1983 level of $48,303. Past grant totals were $6,653 in 1980; $25,333 in 1981; and $34,749 in 1982.

FOCUS plans to make grant requests of nearly $50,000 during the 1984-85 school year.

White has been an active member in the Carmel community over the past several years. A former school board president, he now serves on the city forestry commission and just recently was named to the Carmel Citizens Committee Board of Directors.

White, who lives in Carmel, is the athletic director and a physical education teacher at Monterey High School. He also serves as a physical education consultant to the Monterey police department.

DAVID COUCH GETS HONORS

David Lawrence Couch, son of Mrs. Sharon L. Couch of Carmel Valley, received high honors in a recent commencement awards ceremony at Kemper Military School and College, Boonville, Mo.

Couch, who entered Kemper as a college freshman at mid-term of the 1983-84 school year, was named to the school's General Honor Society.

Only a small percentage of the Kemper corps is eligible for membership in the honor society and membership indicates high level of extracurricular achievement.

Couch also received the Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America award as a basic course cadet who has excelled in a specific military science history course. He also received a Kemper certificate for intellectual interest in English composition.

Couch is a cadet corporal and squad leader in Alpha Co. in the Kemper Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

"CURVED BRISTLES MAKE SENSE"

SPIRULINA: THE FOOD OF THE FUTURE IS HERE NOW.
Spirulina Plankton is the most basic substance in the whole food chain... Spirulina's high-quality protein contains 18 of 22 amino acids required for health — and all eight essential amino acids in the correct proportion. Protein such as this is rarely found in non-animal sources, so Spirulina is popular with vegetarians. And Spirulina's protein, which provides sustaining energy to the human body, is up to 95 percent, digestible as compared with beef's 20 percent. Several kinds of unusual proteins called biliproteins which occur naturally in our own bodies are found in Spirulina. Spirulina is low in calories, fats and sodium and amazingly high in efficient proteins (containing 60 to 71 percent) and all the cell salts and enzymes for body metabolism.

BUSINESS BEAT

BY FLORENCE MASON

Stock Exchange for sale

THE "for sale" sign is out on a number of Carmel businesses. Unfortunately, one of them — again — is the Stock Exchange restaurant, because of loan problems in one of the many spin-offs from the National Bank of Carmel's demise.

On a happier note: two local business people of many years' good standing in our community are happily contemplating retirement. Bob and Jean Koplan, owners of that delightfully odorous shop, Coffee Beans and Tea Leaves in the Court of the Golden Bough off Ocean Avenue, have decided that 17 years is long enough. And Nell Lohr, who has clothed residents and visitors for the past 14 years, is ready to close the door of Nell's Plum Tree, and travel.

The Koplans' shop was not their first business venture in Carmel. Before that, it was the Vagabond Motel and the Cottage of Sweets. But it will be their last. Bob Koplan, now 74, said: "It's been lots of fun being part of the commercial world in Carmel, but now it's time to relax and enjoy our remaining years."

The shop, he insists, is not just a "tourist" business in the usual sense. "We sell to residents, and do a good mail order business, and sometimes visitors come in to take something special home with them."

Nell Lohr plans an active retirement. She took her first cruise last year, and "more cruises" are definitely on her agenda. She also will devote some time to improving her tennis game, she said. Now a Pacific Grove resident, she plays at the Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach. "And it will be back to my first love — painting," she said. "It has been years since I've had the time to do it."

She described her women's clothing shop on Dolores Street as a refuge through the years. "It's been great for me," she said. "But I'm already past the age where I should retire."

AND NOW THERE ARE TWO

One antique store isn't enough for Jacques Soto. So in addition to De Soto Antiques in Monterey, which he has owned for two years, he is now the owner of Deco'rations, the antique store on Dolores Street near Seventh Avenue, next to the Village Theater.

Soto won quick approval for his application to take over that shop when he told the business license board that he planned to continue selling the antique furniture and jewelry offered there, without any major changes. However, he does expect to bring in "some nice crystal and porcelain" and to increase the number of authentic antiques.

Soto is originally from North Africa. He was born there and came to the United States (Florida) when he was seven. The impetus for his move to the West Coast was that his stepfather had been born and raised in Chino. When Soto ended his military service, he decided to make California his home. He has been on the peninsula eight years and now lives in Pacific Grove. Single, he likes swimming and "the sea in general."

"It won't be easy, but I'm going to give it a try!" he said of running two shops.

COMING TO THE CROSSROADS

Herb Evans says he should have an "eat and run" special at his new restaurant in The Crossroads. That's because the restaurant, Cafe Central, will be "right out the back door" of his first, and very successful Crossroads business — the Treadmill.

The restaurant, which Evans hopes to open by the end of September, takes him back to the kind of business in which he has had many years' experience. He started with a restaurant in New York, operated one in Westwood (Southern California) and most recently was the owner of The Yellow House in Santa Monica, one of nine he has owned.

Cafe Central, toward the front of The Crossroads, facing Rio Road, will embody concepts Herb Evans has developed over the years. It will be "light and airy" and the full day of meal service will include a wide variety of foods. He mentioned a few: cinnamon swirl French toast on the breakfast menu, special salads and sandwiches served for lunch and into the afternoon, steamed clams and lobster among the dinner items. There will be a late supper too. Another feature of the restaurant will be "family-style feasts," just one way of serving dinner.

Evans will oversee both Cafe Central and the Treadmill, which opened last August and does indeed have a treadmill on which to try out the shop's sport shoes. That shop also features all kinds of sports clothing and sports-related novelties.

HAPPY 55th!

You have just one week left in which to help Monterey Savings celebrate its 55th year in business, if you haven't already done so. Carmel customers can apply for a special interest bonus this month, or for a free drawing on June 29 for a $1,200 shopping spree at Holman's department store. The local offices are at San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue in Carmel and on Berwick Drive in Carmel Valley.

Monterey Savings was founded by Glenn and Mary Littlefield in June, 1929. Their concern for saving money to build homes and provide higher education for children was reflected in the name of their new company: "The Educational Building and Loan Association."

Two weeks after the doors opened, the first daily passenger flights began at the Monterey airport, the first talking motion pictures ever seen in this area were shown at a theater just down the street, and PG&E brought natural gas to Monterey for the first time. It was also the year in which a record catch of 117,000 tons of sardines was recorded.

The business remained in the Littlefield family until the death of the Littlefields' son, Bob, in 1980. That was followed, in the fall of 1982, by Monterey Savings' merger with Coast Savings.

MEANWHILE, IN PARIS...

Carmel resident Charles Bancroft, chairman of the California Insurance Group, spoke to insurance executives from more than 20 countries in Paris earlier this month. Bancroft talked about insurance marketing and distribution during the International Week on Insurance Marketing, presented every three years by a French insurance association.

Bancroft spoke about the challenges faced by independent agents and the companies they represent from direct writers who represent only one company. His focus was on personal lines of insurance such as homeowners and auto. Bancroft said change always has been important to the growth of business.

"It is nothing to be feared," he said. "Instead, it can be understood and appreciated as a catalyst that helps develop new answers to important problems."

California Insurance Group, which headquarters in Monterey, markets its personal lines products throughout California.

roof, and that roof is above Carmel Rancho Lane. The new company is known collectively as Advertising Communication Associates.

The combined offices include West Star Productions (David Strang), Bindel Design Company (Cheryl Bindel) and The Graphic Link (Mark Farina). It's the only local agency with an in-house darkroom and sound production facility, and its owners say it is now able to offer "full advertising services from concept and design to complete commercial advertising production and media planning."

West Star Productions recently received a second place "Sam Seagull" award for a series of three radio commercials produced for the Mark Thomas Outrigger. Strang, who has been a peninsula resident eight years, is a former KWAV disc jockey.

Cheryl Bindel, a lifetime resident of the peninsula and wife of restaurateur David Bindel, has been involved with several retail stores in Carmel as display and design consultant.

The "link" in the name of Mark Farina's company may also be a sly reference to one of his greatest interests, as he is a former golf pro at The Lodge at Pebble Beach, which now uses his design and illustration talents. The Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula is another of Farina's clients.

PUT IT ON YOUR CALENDAR

Asst. Carmel Police Chief Bob Fischer referred to them as "these rascals." It was said with a smile, however, and the Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula won quick approval from the Business License and Code Review Board for their annual Parade of the Caber along Ocean Avenue.

The date this year is Friday, July 27. The Ballantine Caber will be carried from the Red Lion Tavern on San Carlos Street to Devendorf Park just before 5 p.m. A brief program of Scottish music in the park will be followed by a procession down Ocean Avenue to Lincoln Street and back to the Red Lion.

Fischer said "these rascals who are coming into town again are one of our favorite events." He said their plans are the same as for previous years, and that the police department doesn't anticipate any problems.

NOTED

When relatives were here one weekend recently, they reported — and I shared — something that was new to me. They stayed at Grosvenor's Garden Inn, which has a new sign advertising it as a "bed and breakfast inn." The breakfast isn't served there, but at the Casanova restaurant on Fifth Avenue.

Each guest at Grosvenor's receives a card entitling him or her to $4 off the bill for each breakfast at Casanova. I thought it was a fine idea. And I can report that the French toast at Casanova is excellent.

Two interesting new businesses, with individual entrepreneurs, have opened recently in this area. One is Computer Management Consultants, a computer consulting firm. Owner Rick Heuer of Carmel explained that his company is not affiliated with any retail operation.

Instead, its purpose is to aid small businesses in their transition to computers through needs analysis, equipment selection and installation. He'll also advise on improvements to existing systems.

The second business is Linda Nelson's Host Convention Services, with offices in The Barnyard. Her firm offers to plan and make all the arrangements for convention group programs. She will also provide professional destination service from arrival to departure.

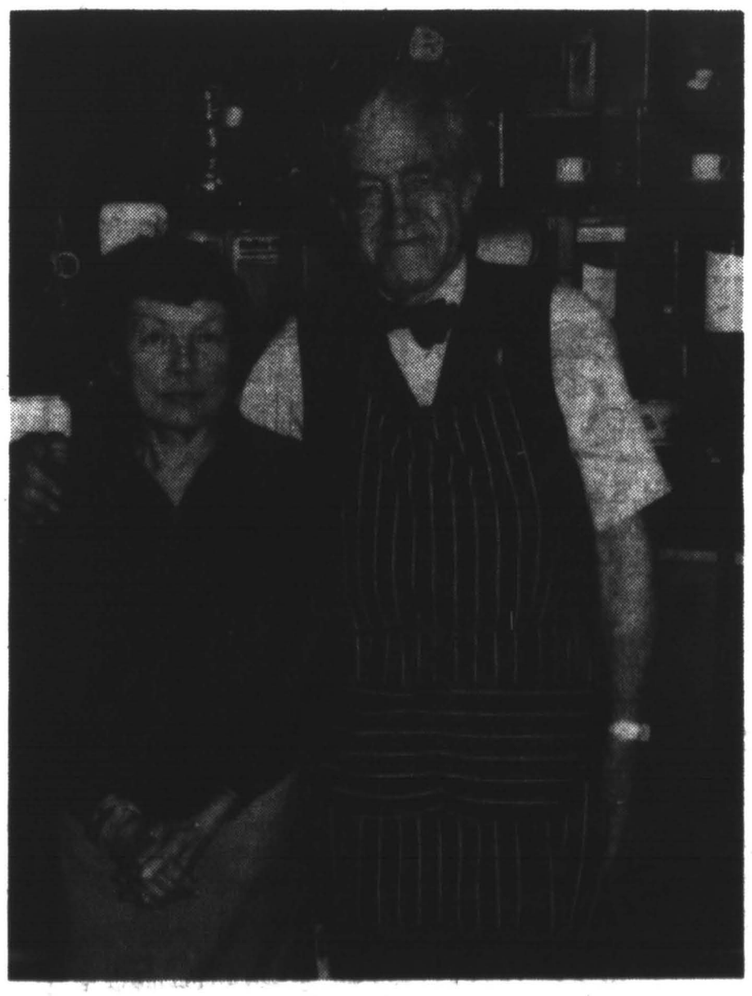
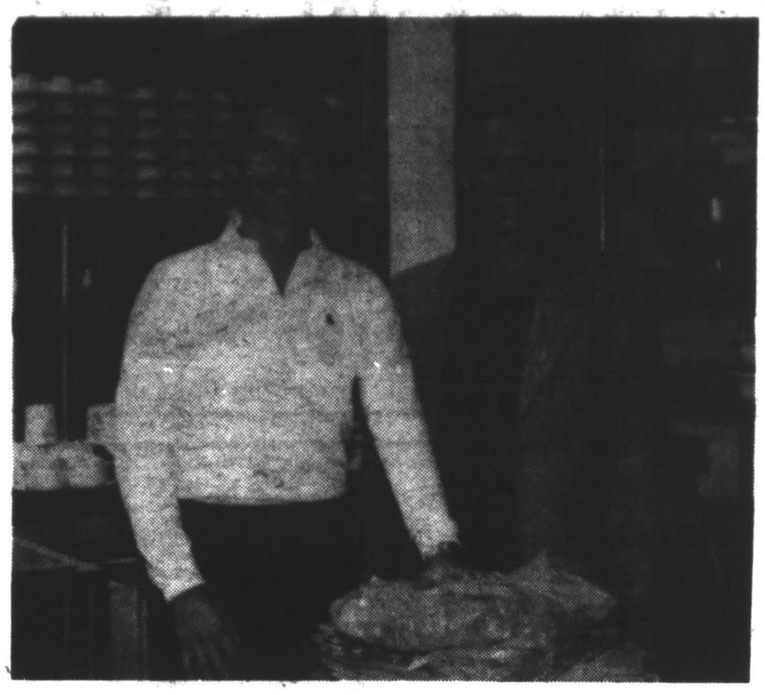
One local professional man has returned to the peninsula after some very special research. Dr. Ronald Lebus is back from a four-year hiatus in Florida, where he completed independent research with new cosmetic bonding resins. He has established a dentistry practice on Carmel Rancho Boulevard.



BOB AND JEAN Koplan are retiring as owners of Coffee Beans and Tea Leaves in the Court of the Golden Bough, off Ocean Avenue.

LA PLAYA hotel, which has been undergoing a facelift since Nov. 15, is to reopen with an entirely new look July 1. Above, overlooking the work underway on the west side of the hotel, are Newton Cope Jr., Christine Barrett, and John Cope.



BOSSES OF the new La Playa hotel restaurant "The Spyglass" will be Michael Ellis (left), restaurant manager; and Rodney Clark, chef.

La Playa scheduled to reopen July 1

THE SIX-MONTH renovation project for La Playa is expected to be completed within the next week so the 75-room hotel can open July 1.

The Cope family — Newton, Newton, Jr. and John — own La Playa as well as the exclusive Huntington Hotel in San Francisco's Nob Hill. They also have interests in several restaurants, including "The Big Four" in that city.

The younger Copes, Newton Jr. and John, plan an active role in the operation of the hotel, which the family bought from Bud Allen on April 1, 1983.

John will act as the general manager while brother Newton Jr. is the food and beverage manager.

The Copes closed the hotel for renovation work that began Nov. 15. La Playa is in the residential zone of the city on the southwest corner of Camino Real Street and Eighth Avenue.

The Copes have hired seven-year La Playa employee Christine Barrett as their hotel manager.

"We will open quietly," Ms. Barrett told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

The hotel will reopen with a completely new "mediterranean" motif for the former 75 rooms, three banquet facilities, conference room, restaurant and cocktail lounge, she said.

The restaurant has been named "The Spyglass" and will operate under the auspices of manager Michael Fallis, formerly with the Sheraton chain in Steamboat Springs, Colo.; and chef Rodney Clark, formerly of the Highlands Inn.

The restaurant, which will be open for breakfast, lunch and dinner, will feature early California cuisine, Ms. Barrett said.

Breakfast will be served from 7 a.m. to 11 a.m.; lunch will be offered from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; with dinner from 5:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.

The 63-seat restaurant has been expanded to include a new patio dining area high above the residential roof tops. Facing southwest, the patio will be "the only place in Carmel you can watch the sun set from while having cocktails," she said.

The hotel rooms will be furnished with "custom made furniture" and the lobby floor will be terra cotta tiles and "hand designed area rugs," she said.

A concierge will be in the lobby to take care of the visitors' needs, such as restaurant reservations, theater tickets and sight-seeing suggestions, she said.

The outside gazebo will be replaced with a new similar facility. Wedding ceremonies on the grounds will still be available, Ms. Barrett said.

OBITUARIES

Nathaniel Owings

Nathaniel Alexander Owings of Big Sur, internationally renown architect, died June 13 at his second home near Santa Fe, N.M. following a period of failing health. He was 81.

A founding partner in the firm of Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, he was involved with such projects as the reflecting basin in front of the U.S. Capitol, the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., wartime construction of the town and laboratories in Oak Ridge, Tenn., corporate headquarters including Lever House and Chase Manhattan Bank in New York City, the John Hancock Center in Chicago, and the Oakland Coliseum complex.

In Monterey County, he was a leading force behind enactment of the 1962 Coast Master Plan which was established to preserve the wild and scenic Big Sur coast.

Born Feb. 5, 1903 in Indianapolis, Ind., he studied at the University of Illinois architectural engineering school in 1921-22 and was graduated with a bachelor of science degree in architecture from Cornell University in 1927 after he recovered from a severe illness.

His breakthrough in architecture came in 1933, when he was named development supervisor of the Chicago World's Fair, "A Century of Progress," by his brother-in-law and future partner Louis Skidmore. He later helped design the 1939 New York World's Fair.

He was the key figure for his firm's development of the Coast Master Plan for Monterey County which proposed that Highway 1 be designated as a scenic highway and that development along its natural, rugged beauty be discouraged. More recently, he supported legislation authored by Rep. Leon Panetta (D-16th) to place Big Sur under federal jurisdiction. He and his firm recommended the construction of the waterfront hotel and convention center in downtown Monterey.

He received a gold medal from the American Institute of Architects in 1982 and was cited several times for individual projects, including Carmel Valley Manor. He was registered as a professional architect in 35 states.

He earned honorary degrees from Ball State in 1970, Indiana University in 1973 and Butler University in 1976.

He was a scouting commissioner with the Boy Scouts of America in Chicago, and became an Eagle Scout in 1920. He was honored in 1975 as a Distinguished Eagle Scout for his achievements in public life.

Children get fingerprinted

Officers of the Carmel Police Department fingerprinted between 150 and 175 children at Junipero Serra School last week, with the hope that neither they nor the childrens' parents will ever have to use them.

The project was initiated because of the concern of the school, the parents and the police department about the number of child abductions reported throughout the country. The prints would also serve as indentification in case of a serious injury or death. "They are security for the parents," Sister Geraldine, principal of the school, explained.

She said notices were sent to all the childrens' parents and that about 75 percent gave their permission for the fingerprinting. "Some already had it done," Sister Geraldine said. She explained that the parents, not the school, retain the prints. "The officers of the Carmel Police Department, who came here on two successive days to do the printing, were fantastic to work with," she said.

The Golden Years

The best way for older people to cut calories, says Dr. Myron Winick of the Institute of Human Nutrition at Columbia University, is to consume less fat. Reducing our intake of total fat, saturated fat and cholestorol not only helps to hold down weight, but also lowers the fat level in the blood, thereby reducing the risk of coronary artery disease.

Council to ask church for help with drainage

THE CARMEL Cty Council does not want to turn the other cheek, but would rather have the Catholic Church pay up to $90,000 to make amends for a past mistake.

The council at its special June 18 budget session appointed members David Maradei and Robert Stephenson as emissaries to see if the Catholic Church will pay half the cost of a proposed $181,000 storm retention pond at Mission Trail Park off Rio Road near the Carmel Mission.

City Administrator Douglas Schmitz proposes the project in the tentative 1984-85 budget of $6.7 million as a way to stop the annual flooding — and subsequent damage — to Rio Road.

The retention pond would catch the storm runoff and slowly release it down the 24-inch pipe that runs across Rio Road, through the baseball field and out to the river.

The flooding of Rio Road poses several concerns to the city. First it causes a safety hazard from cars that careen out of control. Second, the water already has damaged Rio Road so that the entire street must be repaired at an estimated cost of about $350,000.

Council members David Maradei and Robert Stephenson are not convinced that the city should pay the entire bill for the retention pond.

The councilmen argued that the church should be approached to share the costs since the current drainage pipe is inadequate.

Their comments were backed up in the oral report from Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio.

The storm water runoff orginally was handled through an open ditch. However, years ago church officials closed the safety hazard by putting a drain pipe in the ditch and covered the ditch, D'Ambrosio explained.

However, D'Ambrosio added that the county approved a drain pipe that is too small. It would require an "Los Angeles" type 72-inch drain pipe to work adequately, he said.

"The bottom line is you have too small a hole for the water to go through," D'Ambrosio told the council.

Schmitz told the council that about 55 percent of the runoff comes from city property while another 45 percent is county responsibility.

Schmitz does not see the church paying a share. "I don't think they'll pay half of it, but we haven't hit a stone wall like we have with the county of Monterey."

BUT Stephenson and Maradei want to approach the church.

"Because they have a basic responsibility, I think they (the church) should share the costs," Maradei said. "The city will spend an enormous amount of money to solve a problem they created."

Stephenson agrees with Maradei.

"The pipe is the problem so they should help pay for it," he said.

"I can think of a lot of things to spend the money on rather than correcting somebody else's mistake," Stephenson said.

The $181,000 is budgeted from the city's Transportation Development Act account that actually is kept in a special county budget. TDA funds are generated from state sales tax and can be used for public transportation and roads projects.

The city usually receives about $70,000 per year in TDA monies. However, the city has not spent its allocation every year, thus the account has inflated to about $400,000.

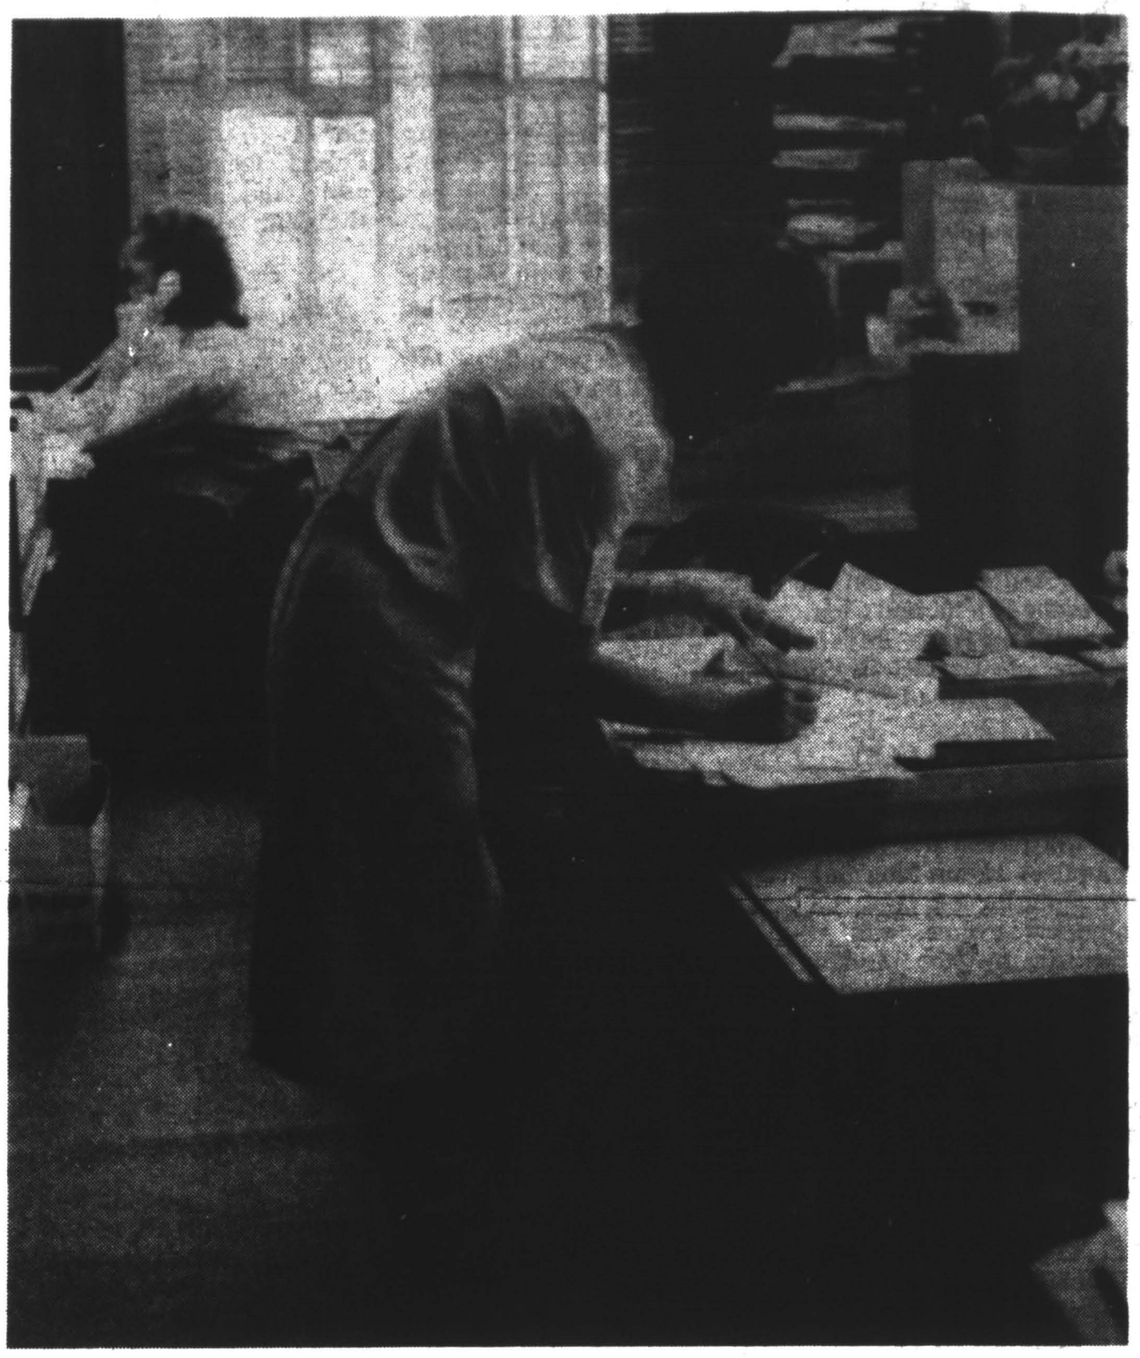
But even though the money is not coming out of the city general fund.

"The fact that it's coming out of TDA funds doesn't mean you can spend it willy-nilly," he said.

Stephenson pointed out that the funds could help finance some other city projects, including the proposed walkway on Scenic Road.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold who suggested that Maradei and Stephenson meet with church officials to "see if they can persuade them to shoulder their responsibilites."

Councilman James Wright and Mayor Charlotte Townsend were in the minority of the 3-2 vote on Mrs. Arnold's suggestion.



FUNDS TO finance the remodeling of Carmel City Hall are included in the proposed 1984-85 municipal budget that was discussed by the council June 18. 'Siddhartha' opens at Forest Theater

By ANNE PAPINEAU

THE PITFIRES will be stoked as the pine-studded stage of the Forest Theater in Carmel serves as a foundation for travels through time, space and the human mind.

RAMIE WIKDAHL directs and co-wrote the Forest Theater production of Siddhartha. (Photograph by Alan McEwen.)

The show is Siddhartha: A Dream Odyssey, and its world premiere will take place at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, June 21. This "inner voyage through a hidden dream world" continues Thursdays through Saturdays until July 21.

Dance, karate, music and magic are combined in this new telling of the Siddhartha legend. The work is written by Alicia O'Neil of Seaside and directed by Ramie Wikdahl of Pebble Beach. A cast of locals who in some cases double as technical crews have polished lines and karate movements since May in preparation for the Forest Theater opening.

"It's a risk to do an original play," Ms. Wikdahl noted between turns supervising set construction at the historic site. "The beauty of this play is that when the Forest Theater first started doing plays in 1910 there have been 22 original plays." However no premieres have occurred in the last decade, she said.

Presentation of Siddhartha would suggest a near-return by the Forest Theater to what Carmel author Mary Austin rallied for in 1908. She suggested "a place be found in the woods where plays by Carmel writers could be read or acted for the benefit and amusement of the authors and their friends."

Ramie Wikdahl, who directed The Lion in Winter, Cyrano de Bergerac and Rashomon at Forest, retains enthusiasm for the community theater.

"Audiences get caught up in the magic of the pine trees and the two fires. Everything has remained rustic."

Siddhartha, while adapted from an ancient legend born in India, will be what Wikdahl calls "a high-tech show. We will have visual illusions and magic."

"I wanted to do an original play but I wanted the guidelines of a fable or legend. The heart of the play would not be original, but the treatment would," she explained.

The play is inspired by the Hermann Hesse book of the same name. Its director described the basic plot line as about "a fellow who takes a karate class. He gets knocked out, and when he wakes up he's in 500 B.C. India. He sees the shadow of Siddhartha under the Bodhi tree, 'the tree of enlightenment.' "

"The message is — 'to thine own self be true,' " she stated. "In Western society we tend to go to the rational mind and not to the intuition. I wanted to do a play that deals with 'go with the gut.' "

ELEVEN principal performers have dual roles in the play. Most of the initial action takes place behind a restaurant in a room that serves as a Karate Dojo (training school). The chief character, David, played by Dennis Garber, is a successful actor who works out in his uncle's Dojo, along with his two brothers, Alex (Larry Ayo) and Robert (David M. Sterling).

When David is accidentally knocked out at the Dojo, he begins a dream odyssey to ancient India. He creates a "theater of the inner mind," in which all of the people in the Dojo become characters of ancient legend.

Ms. Wikdahl said "the actors got so intimate with their characters it was easier to go to the actor and try to see what the character would say or do. The actors have evolved the script."

Original choreography for Siddhartha is by Akemi Ito. Her sister, Seiko Ito, who holds a black belt in karate, provided learned assistance in the Dojo scenes. Costumes and accessories are by Nancy Jacobson.

Summer sprints roll at Laguna Seca

MORE ACTION than the San Francisco/Oakland Bay Bridge at 5 o'clock on Friday marks the KOME/Bud Light Summer Sprints. The autos roll into Laguna Seca Raceway with two very diverse main events this weekend, June 23-24.

Teamed at the raceway will be the Renault Alliance Cup sedans and the single-seat, open-wheel Formula Atlantic cars, which run under the West Coast Atlantic Racing banner.

This will mark the fourth appearance of the Renault Alliance Cup sedans at Laguna Seca, located on Highway 68 between Salinas and Monterey. Their racing is marked by large fields, sometimes as many as 51 starters, and a lot of action, fender-bending and sometimes whole car crunching.

The competition is very close quarter, sometimes resembling a Bay Area commute, but at speeds of more than 70 miles per hour.

The Renaults boast few modifications. Most are in the area of safety, such as roll bars, window nets, competition seat and shoulder belts and suspension changes. This is why the top 40 finishers in the last event, run here May 6, were all on the same lap and the margin of victory was a scant 0.310 seconds.

Mitch Wright of San Ramon has become a strong favorite, having won two of the three races. Can he make it three in a row? John Norris of Culver City was second to him in May and will be out to avenge that loss.

Wright beat Bernie Storc of Santa Rosa in this race last year and was third behind Ray Kong of El Sobrante and Bob Lesnett of Lafayette in the inaugural in 1983.

By contrast, the Formula Atlantic main event will be a pair of sprint races, scored on the Olympic point system. The organizers will take a page out of the Champion Spark Plug 200 motorcycle road race book, Laguna Seca's major attraction this season July 21 and 22.

The Atlantic cars will add their finishing positions in the two sprint heat races to determine the winner. In the case of a tie, the second heat finishing position will determine the overall order.

FORMULA Atlantic has long been thought of as the training ground for such stellar attractions as the World Championship Formula I circuit.

The cars are powered by the Ford Cosworth engine and built around a monocoque chassis or "tub." There are adjustable airfoils front and rear, which make the cars handle very well in twisting circuits, such as Laguna Seca's nine-turn, 1.9 mile layout.

Dan Marvin of Berkeley has won two straight main events and half of those staged. The cars are built by half a dozen manufacturers, although most of the front runners drive Ralt RT-4s. Other chassis are constructed by March, Tiga, Lola, Argo and Entech.

Marvin is the point leader who heads Rod Bennett of Campbell by seven counters into the Laguna Seca race. Chris Bender of Reno is third in the standings.

Also on the schedule for the weekend is a full Sports Car Club of America, San Francisco Region, Divisional Championship. The drivers in the half a dozen racing groups are earning points to qualify for Divisional Championships and a guaranteed spot in the National Championship runoffs, held in October in Atlanta.

The San Francisco Region, which boasts a motto as the region which "Knows How," produced no less than eight national champions last year in the Atlanta Runoffs, which are sponsored by the Champion Spark Plug Company.

The schedule June 23 calls for qualifying, starting at 9 a.m. The Atlantic cars will qualify at 1 p.m. and the Renaults at 1:45.

The Sunday schedule will start with warmups at 9 a.m. and Divisional Championship racing at 10:10 a.m. The first of the two Formula Atlantic hets will get under way at 1:40 p.m. with the Renault Alliance Cup feature slated at 2:10 p.m. and the Formula Atlantic finale set for a 2:55 p.m. green flag.

Tickets for the event, which include paddock admission and grandstand access, are priced at $12 for both days or $10 for Sunday. Tickets will be available at the gate. For details, call 373-1811.

THESE Formula Atlantic competitors will run Saturday and Sunday, June 23-24, in the Summer Sprints at Laguna Seca Raceway.

Pebble Beach Polo Club plays host to tournament

THE PEBBLE BEACH Polo Club will play host to the Pacific Coast Four-Goal Tournament, scheduled Saturday and Sunday, June 23-24.

Nine teams will compete at Collins Field in Pebble Beach. The public is invited to observe the matches free of charge. The usual $4 gate fee applies for entry to Pebble Beach.

The action begins at approximately noon Saturday and 11 a.m. Sunday and continues throughout the afternoon.

A polo match consists of six chukkers (periods) of seven minutes each. Time is continuous and the clock is stopped only in the event of an injury or rules violation.

According to the U.S. Polo Association, the basic concept of polo is for players to strike the ball, from horseback and usually at high speed, in such a manner as to either pass it to a team mate or to direct a scoring shot between the goal posts.

Observers should try to anticipate what each player will do next.

725 LIGHTHOUSE, MONTEREY

LAGOON at the Mouth of Little Sur River is among the Lester Boronda originals shown at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art June 23 through Sept. 5.

Historical, modern works shown at Monterey museum

ART EXHIBITS that embrace both traditional and contemporary modes open Saturday, June 23 at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, 559 Pacific St., Monterey. The shows continue through Sept. 5.

Paintings by Lester Boronda, whose great-grandfather arrived in California in 1769 with Junipero Serra's second expedition, will be highlighted.

Boronda's family history in California can be traced back 200 years, according to art historian Betty Lochrie Hoag McGlynn.

Born in Nevada in 1886, Boronda was educated near Salinas before he began his art career which included study at the Mark Hopkins Institute in San Francisco, the Art Students League in New York, as well as Munich and Paris.

He returned to the United States at the start of World War I to open a picture-framing and furniture-design shop in New York, but often returned to the Monterey area where he painted and displayed his work at the Del Monte Gallery.

The artist, McGlynn wrote, "made major contributions to American art history." He was influenced by Arthur Mathews during his studies in San Francisco and applied the principles he learned during that period "in his own career during the few years he lived in Monterey, then for the rest of his life in New York and Connecticut.

"He achieved fame as a master craftsman and as a painter; his works were exhibited in leading museums and galleries throughout the country."

His retirement from his furniture-design shop followed the inheritance of his family's property near Salinas. He had, at the same time, planned to build a special studio for himself near Mystic, Conn. but died in 1956 during its construction.

Paintings of California's Pomo Indian tribe by Grace Carpenter Hudson will be shown. The exhibition, which also includes a collection of baskets made by members of the Pomo and other California Indian tribes, provides an overview of the paintings completed throughout Hudson's lifetime (1865-1937).

It is, according to Palm Springs Desert Art Museum Curator of Art Katherine Plake Hough, "a remarkable record of the Pomo Indian tribe.

"Her accomplishment is not limited to documentation, nor is it merely a catalog of portraits. Grace Carpenter Hudson searched deep within an Indian culture to discover the similarities of mankind. As documentation, her work still is unique in that her firsthand proximity to the Pomo culture of over 80 years ago can never be equaled, only copied."

THAT FIRST-HAND proximity existed from Hudson's early childhood, Hough continued. She was born in Potter Valley, 15 miles northeast of Ukiah, and grew up there near an Indian village.

The Indians were as interested in Hudson, whom they called "Painter Lady," as she was in them because she had a twin brother and the Pomo saw few twins.

Hudson's talent for drawing was encouraged by members of her family and she was enrolled in the California School of Design in 1880. Her second year at the school was marked by her winning of the Alvord Gold

Remodeling project to start in July at P.G. Art Center

REFURBISHMENT is scheduled at the Pacific Grove Art Center during July.

Open for 15 years, the Pacific Grove Art Center is expected to be closed for three weeks next month. The interior is to be repainted, rain damage repaired, new carpet laid, track lighting and a new front awning installed.

The new lighting will expand the exhibition space by 300 running feet and make room for additional exhibits. The Pacific Grove Art Center is at 568 Lighthouse Ave.

Barbara Bode, executive director of the art center, said professional estimates value these improvements at approximately $25,000. Some volunteers in the painting and electrical fields have come forward; others are still needed.

The annual fund-raising auction is scheduled for July 28. Proceeds will go toward the renovation.

Craig Hemphill of LaPorte's Auction Studio will coordinate the auction. Donations of all kinds are needed, including art works, jewelry, antiques, services, electronic equipment, wines and automobiles.

Staff changes announced at Friends of Photography

TWO STAFF members have been added at The Friends of Photography. Julia Nelson has been appointed to the position of executive assistant, editorial. JoAnn Yandle will be the new gallery technician, replacing Libby McCoy.

Nelson succeeds Claire Peeps as the executive assistant. She will have major responsibility for the production of the newsletter and will provide editorial help on the journal, Untitled, and on other publishing projects. Peeps, who held the position since May 1982, now serves as the coordinator for The Friends' workshop program.

Nelson comes to The Friends from the Photography Department of The Art Institute of Chicago, where she worked as a curatorial intern for eight months. During the internship she supervised the Photography Study Room at the Institute and organized the exhibition "New Photomontage."

This show grew out of work done on her master's degree in the history of art, which she completed through the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

As gallery technician, JoAnn Yandle will have responsibility for the physical installation of gallery exhibitions. She will also coordinate the shipping and receiving of books and prints from the office. She recently finished her bachelor of arts degree in photography at Arizona State University at Tempe.

CARMEL ARTIST Betty Barron shows this landscape and other oils through July at The Thunderbird Bookshop, The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel.

The carved prow of a canoe and panels produced by Maori artists are among the artifacts on loan from private collectors.

Those artists today live, for the most part, on the North Island of New Zealand.

ATTENTION all supporters of Carmel Youth Baseball! There will be a silent auction and wine tasting benefit Sunday, June 24, at the Mission Ranch from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Your $5 contribution will admit two people, which is a tax deductible donation. It should be fun for everyone, so please come if you have a chance.

Monterey Peninsula Dental Group is in the lead in the Major League Softball Division, followed by Fouratt in second place. Carmel Plaza leads in the minor division, followed in second place by Carmel Vikings.

Fouratt players had a good day May 21 when they met Fort Ord and defeated them 15-5. Nancy Rubin pitched the win and went 2-3. Teammate Hallie Levy made two triples and went 4-4. Doubles were collected for Fouratt by Jessica Jacinto, Rosanna Knill, who also went 4-4, and Elvina Scott. Jennifer Griffon went 2-3.

The Fouratt team was not so successful two days later when it fell to Andersons 9-7. Fouratt was hitting well, however, with Jennifer Griffon hitting a home run, and Hallie Levy hitting a triple, two doubles and going 3-4. Other leading hitters for Fouratt included Rosanna Knill with a 2-2 and Tiffany Morton with a 2-3.

In Minor League Softball play, Carmel Plaza defeated Master Mixes 9-7 in a five-inning game called for time, with Cristie Melicia the winning pitcher. Gina Serrano and Cristie Melicia both collected doubles for CP, while Sonny Smith, Lisa Bray, and Alicia Ogden all doubled for MM.

Leading hitters for MM included Amber Huntington and Lisa Bray, while Kate Doran was the leading hitter for CP. Some spectacular plays for MM were made by Sunny Smith, Lisa D'Ambrosio, and Brandy Brusher. Alicia Ogden played an especially fine game.

In Mustang action, Orange Julius came from behind to beat Dick Bruhn 8-7 in the last inning, to remain indefeated in the second half of the season. Willie Moore pitched the win and tripled, as did OJ's Mike Pauley and Brooks Juhring. DB's Brian Frymire and OJ's David Chiappi both doubled and went 2-3.

Carmel Insurance remained undefeated when it met County Mounties with a victory of 10-8. Steven Biliouris pitched the win. Clas Brown tripled for CI, scoring three runs, including the winning run. Daniel Higgins and Sky Feekes both doubled for CI, and CI's Andrew Clark collected a couple of hits. Leading hitter for CM was Kevin Quinn with three singles.

La Playa is now the official winner in the Bronco Division with 12 wins and one loss. The team trampled Derek Rayne 15-4, with Danny Luster pitching the win allowing no hits and no runs. Doubles were collected for LP by Kaleb Stevens, Rick Prieto and Aram Stoney.

Kaleb and Rick were also LP's leading hitters, along with Chris Prieto. Will Griffith and Hans Hess were the leading hitters for DR, and DR's Danny Kleinbardt made an outstanding catch deep in right center field. LP's second baseman Kaleb Stevens also made two great catches of line drives.

Last Saturday, Pine Inn upset Carmel Valley Disposal with a victory of 9-5. Russell Peavey had an incredible game with TWO home runs over the fence, one of them bringing in three runs. Russell also pitched the win. Robbie Takigawa went 2-5 for PI and Steve White helped the win with a double play CVD's Scott Allen went 2-4.

Directly following, LP picked up its 12th win by defeating Nielsen Bros. Market in an extremely close game until the sixth inning, and ended 13-8. Kevin Winton was the winning pitcher. Benno Weiner was the leading hitter for NM with a double and a 3-4, while LP's Brett Nicholson hit a beautiful double to put LP back in the lead in the fourth inning. Rick Prieto was leading hitter for LP with a 3-4.

YOUTH PERSPECTIVE

BY LU SPIRIT

Human life and stop signs

JUST RECENTLY, I got into an accident at San Carlos and First with my mother. There were no signs at this blind intersection.

It was a new car we had that smashed front end into the side of a steel rent-a-car. At the site of the accident a police officer informed us that three or four other accidents had occurred there involving a total of at least two deaths. Two deaths!

Does it take a human life or more to get it across to the city that it's because of a lack of stop signs?

The most common of intersection accidents result from no sign at the intersections, just little lines which do hardly any good — at least to the drunk driver or reckless driver that might be the cause of some mother and baby stuck to the street.

When officers say they've many times peeled people off of the pavement, they aren't lying. Today my column expresses anger and also sorrow. This whole traffic situation is ridiculous, with the lack of sidewalks, stop signs and even crosswalks in some places.

I only hope someone in the city council will read this or will hear of this because it is a serious matter that involves debts, injuries and pain — three things that most often destroy people's lives.

Also, I'd like to put in a good word to the Carmel Police Department for helping us out in problems such as terrible accidents, crimes, and of course the little missing girl that was found by Deputy Luna in Mission Fields. Thank God it wasn't anything serious.

Zantman given Resistance medal

By ANNE PAPINEAU

THE GENTLE lighting, polished sculpture and painting bedecked walls of the Zantman Art Galleries provide a kind of refuge from the traffic-congested streets of Carmel.

These galleries also supply a study in contrasts for their owner, Hans Zantman, a survivor of the Nazi death camps of World War II. For his role in battling the German occupation of his native country during that war, Zantman was last month awarded the distinguished Cross of the Resistance of the Netherlands. The award was bestowed in the name of Queen Juliana.

If his office overlooking a busy Ocean Avenue seems light-years away from a German concentration camp, Zantman still has no trouble recalling the date he was liberated from Dachau: April 30, 1945.

"Dachau was one big bunch of evidence," Zantman said of the now notorious concentration camp located outside of Munich, Germany. "Time played a very big part in our liberation. We heard it (Dachau) was all undermined to be destroyed."

"A handful of prisoners escaped the concentration camp and went through the firing lines," he said. "The prisoners told (Gen. George S.) Patton that he must send some troops to Dachau."

According to Zantman, Patton went against orders in this late stage of the war to liberate the prisoners.

"I was the first man who talked with the first American soldier at the gates of Dachau. Patton broke the rules of his higher command. I can tell that story now without getting in trouble with Mr. Patton."

Liberation from Dachau and the end of World War II took place almost concurrently in the life of Hans Zantman. These were concluding chapters in his war story that began with Zantman's active participation in the resistance movement.

Born in the Dutch East Indies, Zantman, like many Dutch colonials, was educated in the Netherlands.

"I was in my 20s and working as an accountant in Haarlem when war broke out," Zantman explained in a slight Dutch accent. "Haarlem is a big city, capital of the province of Northern Holland and about 15 miles from Amsterdam."

Haarlem was also home to Zantman's parents, who returned to Europe following his father's retirement.

THE NETHERLANDS were occupied by Germany from 1940 to 1945. Food was rationed. Supplies of all commodities were scarce, and the black market thrived, Zantman recalled.

"When we were first occupied, the Dutch had sufficient food and so forth. In the beginning you were still driving your bicycle," he said. "But later on we were driving not on rubber tires but on wooden tires."

Scattered Resistance groups sprang up to combat the Nazi takeover or simply to assist persecuted citizens. "There were always lots of small organizations working independently of each other because of fear of being trapped by the Germans," Zantman said. "A group of us worked to help the poor or help people escape, or help Jewish people go underground."

Food and medical supplies had to be procured for the groups in hiding. This was one of Zantman's tasks.

"The Germans had put me — maybe because they knew that I was working in that field — they put me on their blacklist," he recalled. "As a result of that I was called up with many important Resistance leaders. I was never important at all. I never was and never shall be."

As World War II progressed, numerous acts of sabotage were committed against Nazi property. Zantman recalled that telephone lines were cut and bridges destroyed.

"So the Nazis started punishing the Dutch by putting them on surveillance," he explained. Suspected Resistance members and other "blacklisted" Dutch were forced to guard Nazi property. If it was destroyed, these Dutch guards were "punished as an example."

"Twice I was responsible for telegraph wires," he remembered.

In early 1943, Zantman, caught giving Russian prisoners food and cigarettes, was interned in an Amsterdam prison. He remained a prisoner for the duration of World War II.

"The prison was full — jammed up," Zantman said. "A cell for one or two was full of 12. A minister was there for preaching things in the churches the Germans didn't like. Others were from the Underground and Resistance."

Zantman said his stay in that prison was brief. "The Germans processed you to see what they could do with you."

The Dutch concentration camp at Vught was his next destination. Zantman retains vivid memories of the place.

"It had a big outdoor barracks. There was barbed wire, the famous tower that you can see more or less at Soledad (prison)," he said. "You were put to use. They put you in the famous blue and white striped costume — I call it a costume, and took your hair off, nicely bald. So if you tried to escape you were recognized."

AS ZANTMAN recalled, prisoners were put to work to replace German manpower decimated by two great wars.

"After working first for many months outside in very nasty, rotten weather, I was transferred to a commando set up by an industrial company. This was very nice protection for us. You worked inside. During the days you were protected from the German garbage — the S.S."

"We had assembly lines making radios. This big private company worked putting out things the Germans could use."

In this semi-protective setting, Zantman was required to work until 1944.

The food was "uneatable." Atrocities he deliberately "blocked from my mind." What then, was his personal formula for survival?

"I think the strongest thing in my book is to first have a sense of humor," said the gallery owner. "I was young — 23 — I had an enormous good sense of humor and I was a fighter. If you let yourself down you went. Some could not take it. There were too many of those."

"We had a constant joke," Zantman remembered. "The war will be over in 14 days, Fourteen days later there would be 14 more days, then 14 more days."

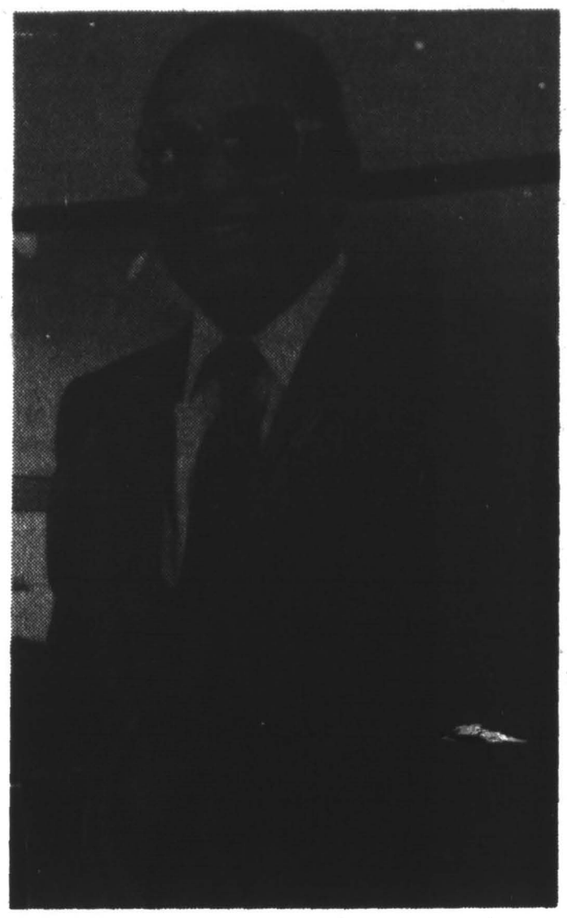
One of those days Zantman recalled as "the most somber experience."

"All of a sudden we were all called up. We were standing up in lines. They started a full day of calling off names, getting the people together.

"We were marched to the railroad stations and put in boxcars, not knowing where we went, not the faintest idea. The ultimate destination was Dachau."

Zantman described Dachau as an outlet for those people who did not pose an immediate threat to the Nazis. "That is my interpretation," he said.

"People who disagreed with the political attitudes of the German regime: mostly Communists, a Bible group, political prisoners as a rule (were imprisoned at Dachau). Next to that, black marketeers, religious groups they found were poison if left out in society."



HANS ZANTMAN, gallery owner and a veteran of Nazi concentration camps, wears the Cross of the Resistance of the Netherlands he was awarded last month in Queen Juliana's name. (Photograph by Holly McFarland.)

Physically, Dachau resembled Camp Roberts in southern Monterey County, he recalled. There Zantman remained as a laborer until rescued by Patton's troops.

"It was a part of my life I cut out. It was terrible. It was unbelievable."

But the government of the Netherlands did not forget Zantman. In May, he was visited at his Carmel Valley home by the Consul of the Netherlands. With his wife and friends present, Zantman was bestowed the Cross of the Resistance.

And he is in good company. Also last month, the Cross of the Resistance was awarded, posthumously, to Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, who was named "Mother of the Resistance."

Rare automobiles to visit Concours

Early entries received for the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance set for Sunday, Aug. 26 at The Lodge at Pebble Beach, indicate the field of cars on display will be outstanding.

Ninety percent of the cars to be shown have never been to Pebble Beach before, according to Lorin Tryon and Jules Heumann, co-chairmen of the event. They also added that close to 50 percent of the total cars expected will be from out of the state and country.

The teams of judges may be hard-pressed to evaluate the 125 contenders for awards. Of interest will be the fully restored 1934 Duesenberg SJ Speedster which held the Class "B" 24-hour distance record on the Bonnieville Salt Flats in Utah for 20 years. The yellow Dusie will be shown by owner Knox Kershaw of Montgomery, Ala.

John Wheatley of Tulsa, Okla. will show his 1938 Mercedes-Benz 540K Sindelfingen Cabriolet. Built for an Italian nobleman before World War II, it was hidden behind a bricked-up wall in a garage until the war ended. It has less than 20,000 original miles.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tickets are $12 each and can be purchased at all gates the day of the show. Net proceeds are given to charity.

Comics convention scheduled

COMIC BOOK artists and writers will join comic book fans at the first major comic book convention set in Monterey. It is scheduled 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday, June 24, at the Monterey Conference Center.

The convention, called Americon, will feature such guests as Sergio Aragones and David Berg, Mad Magazine artists; Frank Cirocco, Marvel comics artist and underground comic artist Ted Richards.

Also in attendance will be Michael T. Gilbert, creator of "The Wraith" and "Mr. Monster;" William Messner Loebs, who draws and writes the adventures of Wolverine MacAlistaire; and Valentino, writer-artist of the parody comic Normalman.

Other events will include an all-day Japanese animation festival, a martial arts demonstration, an auction and a dealers' room filled with comic books and comic-related items.

The convention is open to the public. Tickets are $3 in advance or $3.50 at the door and are available through Comics and Fantasies, 640 Wave St., Monterey. For details, call 375-3367.

Amateurs line up for golf

GOLFERS FROM above and below the San Luis Obispo County line will assemble on Monterey Peninsula golf courses to battle for the 73rd Annual California State Amateur Golf Tournament championship. The competition is scheduled June 25-30.

Approximately 100 amateurs from both the Southern and Northern California divisions have qualified from fields of 300. The 1983 winner, Chris Moe of Milbrae, will return to defend his championship.

Play begins at 8 a.m. Monday at the Cypress Point and Pebble Beach courses. The public is welcome to watch the tournament free of charge. The usual $4 gate fee at Pebble Beach applies, however. For more information, call the press room at The Lodge at Pebble Beach, 624-3811.

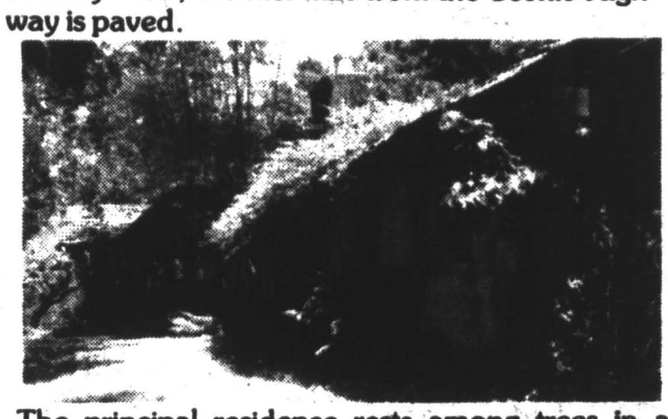
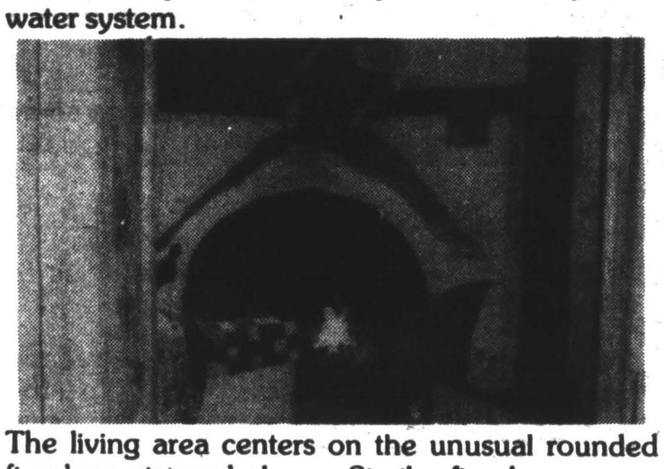
UPPER PARTINGTON RIDGE AMID MAJESTIC BIG SUR COUNTRY

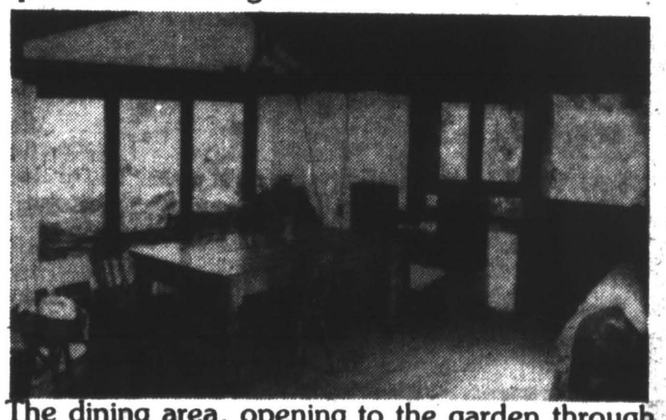
This remote, magical hideaway, built by the famous Big Sur character, Jaime deAngulo, lies near the top of Partington Ridge, about 30 air miles south of Carmel. The land, comprising 3 separate parcels totalling 60 acres, adjoins Los Padres National Forest on the north. Its altitude, 1400-1600' above sea level, places the property above the coastal fog line. Access is via a 3-miles country road; the first mile from the Scenic Highway is paved.



The principal residence rests among trees in a grassy glade. Building materials were packed in before the Scenic Highway was completed. Architecturally unique, the walls are rough textured 8" thick concrete. Colorful vines and flowers climb over the shake roof, enhancing the beauty of the 1,100 sq. ft. home consisting of a kitchen/dining living room, two bedrooms and bath, all with redwood plank ceilings and heavy exposed beams. Additional buildings include a guest house and several other cabins and studios. Utilities include Pacific Telephone, PG&E power and a private water system.



The living area centers on the unusual rounded fireplace pictured above. Similar fireplaces warm the tile-floored bathroom, both bedrooms, and the guest house. Recently installed skylights add cheerful light; Dutch doors of Heavy redwood open to lawns and garden.



The dining area, opening to the garden through wood frame windows, is conveniently served from the nearby kitchen. The thick walls, heavy beams, artistic fireplaces and handcrafted doors combine to make this rustic structure an especially appealing Big Sur home. The sunny, southerly exposure, sound of the surf, forests of madrone, redwood, oak and bay, outlooks to the Pacific Ocean, Sur Coastline and Santa Lucia Mountains create a special Big Sur Paradise. Price is $650,000.
